CAIRO, Wednesday, April 9.

Further advices from Pittsburgh Landing give the following about the battle:

The enemy attacked at 4 o'clock Sunday morning, the brigades of Gens. SHERMAN and PRENTISS being first engaged. The attack was successful, and our entire force was driven back to the river, where the advance of the enemy was checked by the fire of the gunboats.

Our force was then increased by the arrival of Gen. GRANT, with the troops from Savanna, and inspirited by reports of the arrival of two divisions of Gen. BUELL's army.

Our loss this day was heavy, and, besides the killed and wounded, embraced our camp equipage and 36 field guns.

The next morning our forces, now amounting to 80,000, resumed the offensive, and by 2 o'clock P. M. had retaken our camp and batteries, together with some [illegible] of the enemy's guns and a number of prisoners, and the enemy were in full retreat, pursued by our victorious forces.

Our casualties were numerous, and include:

Gen. GRANT, wounded in the ankle, slightly.

Gen. W. H. WALLACE, killed.

Gen. SMITH, severely wounded.

Col. HALL, Sixteenth Illinois, killed.

Col. LOGAN, Thirty-second Illinois, wounded severely.

Col. DAVIS, Forty-sixth Illinois, wounded, severely.

Major HUNTER, Thity-second Illinois, killed.

Col. PEABODY, Twenty-fifth Illinois, severely wounded.

Our killed, wounded and missing are not less than 5,000.

CHICAGO, Wednesday, April 9.

The Times' account of the battle at Pittsburgh Landing on Sunday and Monday, says that the enemy surprised Gen. PRENTISS' Brigade, which was in the advance, five miles beyond Pittsburgh, at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning, taking two regiments prisoners and capturing the General. The fight continued during the entire day, the enemy driving our forces back to Pittsburgh with fearful loss.

Gen. BUELL, with Gen. NELSON's Division, arrived at 4 o'clock, and turned the tide of battle.

The enemy was commanded by Gens. POLK and BEAUREGARD, who suspended the attack about 6 o'clock.

On the morning of Monday, the troops having rested on the field, and being reinforced by Gen. NELSON's Division, supported by the gunboats, drove the enemy back and occupied their former position, completely routing the rebels, who were immediately followed by several thousand cavalry, who at last accounts were some miles beyond Corinth.

The Tribune places our loss at from 600 to 1,000 killed and 3,000 to 4,000 wounded. The rebel loss is twice that number. Six of our batteries were taken and retaken six times.

The Times says that Gen. BEAUREGARD had given orders not to destroy any of the camp equipage taken on Sunday, as he expected a complete victory the next day.

CHICAGO, Wednesday, April 9.

The Tribune's special from Cairo, 9th, gives the following summary of reports gathered from persons who witnessed the battle at Pittsburgh Landing:

The National army was posted between two streams, about four miles apart, that run into the Tennessee nearly at right angles, within about two miles from Pittsburg. The left front was commanded by Gen. PRENTISS, who had several raw regimens. In his rear was Gen. SHERMAN, with his division, completely cutting it off from the main army.

Gen. McCLERNAND put himself at the head of his troops and cut his way through the rebels, and rejoined the army.

The fight had now become desperate, and on Gen. GRANT's assuming command, the enemy were driven back, and the National forces occupied at night nearly the same position they did in the morning. The fight lasted 15 hours.

During the night, Maj.-Gen. LEW. WALLACE came up from Crump's Landing, with 10,000 troops, and in the morning the battle was renewed with great fury. neither party seeming disposed to yield. Between 11 and 12 o'clock the fight was terrific.

Soon after noon, Gen. BUELL had crossed the Tennessee, and attacked the enemy in flank with 40,000 men. The rebels were soon routed, Gen. BUELL pursuing them with 12,000 men, mostly cavalry, and the latest rumors were that he had taken Corinth.

Eight hundred wounded are reported to be on one steamer, on the way down. Gen. HALLECK is expected here in the morning en route for Tennessee. Several barges of ice are ordered to go up the Tennessee to-night for the use of the wounded.

THE FIRST DETAILED REPORTS.

The following dispatch reached us yesterday morning too late to be inserted in our regular morning edition, but was issued at an early hour in an "Extra:"

PITTSBURGH, viâ FORT HENRY,
Wednesday, April 9—3:20 A. M.

The greatest battle of the war has just closed, resulting in the complete rout of the enemy, who attacked us at daybreak Sunday morning. The battle lasted without intermission during the entire day, and was again renewed on Monday morning, and continued undecided until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the enemy commenced their retreat, and are still flying toward Corinth, pursued by a large force of our cavalry. The slaughter on both sides is immense.

The fight was brought on by a body of three hundred of the Twenty-fifth Missouri Regiment, of Gen. PRENTISS' Division, attacking the advance guard of the rebels, which were supposed to be the pickets of the enemy in front of our camps. The rebels immediately advanced on Gen. PRENTISS' division on the left wing, pouring volley after volley of musketry, and riddling our camps with grape, cannister and shell. Our forces soon formed into line and returned their fire vigorously, and by the time we were prepared to receive them, had turned their heaviest fire on the left centre of SHERMAN's Division and drove our men back from their camps, and bringing up a fresh force, opened fire on our left wing, under Gen. McCLERNARD. This fire was returned with terrible effect and determined spirit by both infantry and artillery, along the whole line for a distance of over four miles.

Gen. HURLBURT's Division was thrown forward to support the centre, when a desperate conflict ensued. The rebels were driven back with terrible slaughter, but soon rallied and drove back our men in turn. From about 9 o'clock, until night closed on the bloody scene, there was no determination of the result of the struggle. The enemy exhibited remarkably good generalship. At times engaging the left with apparently their whole strength, they would suddenly open a terrible and destructive fire on the right or centre. Even our heaviest and most destructive fire upon the enemy did not appear to discourage their solid columns. The fire of Maj. TAYLOR's Chicago Artillery raked them down in scores, but the smoke would no sooner be dispersed than the breach would again be filled.

The most desperate fighting took place late in the afternoon. The rebels knew that if they did not succeed in whipping us then, that their chances for success would be extremely doubtful, as a portion of Gen. BUELL's forces had by this time arrived on the opposite side of the river, and another portion was coming up the river from Savannah. They became aware that we were being reinforced, as they could see Gen. BUELL's troops from the river bank, a short distance above us on the left, to which point they had forced their way.

At five o'clock the rebels had forced our left wing back so as to occupy fully two-thirds of our camp, and were fighting their way forward with a desperate degree of confidence in their efforts to drive us into the river, and at the same time heavily engaged our right.

Up to this time we had received no reinforcements, Gen. LEW. WALLACE failing to come to our support until the day was over, having taken the wrong road from Crump's Landing, and being without other transports than those used for Quartermaster's and Commissary stores, which were too heavily laden to ferry any considerable number of Gen. BUELL's forces across the river, those that were here having been sent to bring up the troops from Savanna. We were, therefore, contesting against fearful odds, our force not exceeding thirty-eight thousand men, while that of the enemy was upwards of sixty thousand.

Our condition at this moment was extremely critical. Large numbers of men, had straggled toward the river, and could not be rallied. Gen. GRANT and staff, who had been recklessly riding along the lines during the entire day, amid the unceasing storm of bullets, grape and shell, now rode from right to left, inciting the men to stand firm until our reinforcements could cross the river.

Col. WEBSTER, Chief of Staff, immediately got into position the heaviest pieces of artillery, pointing on the enemy's right, while a large number of the batteries were planted alone the entire line, from the river bank northwest to our extreme right, some two and a half miles distant. About an hour before dusk a general cannonading was opened upon the enemy, from along our whole line, with a perpetual crack of musketry. For a short time the rebels replied with vigor and effect, but their return shots grew less frequent and destructive, while ours grew more rapid.

The gunboats Lexington and Tyler, which lay a short distance off, kept raining shell on the rebel hordes. This last effort was too much for the enemy, and ere dusk had set in the firing had nearly ceased, when, night coming on, all the combatants rested from their awful work of blood.

Our men rested on their arms in the position they had at the close of the night, until the forces under Major-General WALLACE arrived and took position on the right, and General BUELL's forces from the opposite side and Savanna were now being conveyed to the battle-ground. The entire right of Gen. NELSON's Division was ordered to form on the right, and the forces under Gen. CRITTENDEN were ordered to his support early in the morning.

THE SECOND DAY'S BATTLE.

Gen. BUELL having arrived on Sunday evening, in the morning the ball was opened at daylight, simultaneously by Gen. NELSON's Division on the left, and Major-Gen. WALLACE's Division on the right. Gen. NELSON's force opened up a most galling fire on the rebels, and advanced rapidly as they fell back. The fire soon became general along the whole line, and began to tell with terrible effect on the enemy. Generals McCLERNAND, SHERMAN and HURLBURT's men, though terribly jaded from the previous day's fighting still maintained their honors won at Donelson; but the resistance of the rebels at all points of the attack was worthy a better cause.

But they were not enough for our undaunted bravery, and the dreadful desolation produced by our artillery, which was sweeping them away like chaff before the wind. But knowing that a defeat here would be the death blow to their hopes, and that their all depended upon this great struggle, their Generals still urged them on in the face of destruction, hoping by flanking us on the right to turn the tide of battle. Their success was again for a time cheering, as they began to gain ground on us, appearing to have been reinforced; but our left, under Gen. NELSON, was driving them, and with wonderful rapidity, and by eleven o'clock Gen. BUELL's forces had succeeded in flanking them, and capturing their batteries of artillery.

They however again rallied on the left, and recrossed, and the right forced themselves forward in another desperate effort. But reinforcements from General WOOD and Gen. THOMAS were coming in, regiment after regiment, which were sent to Gen. BUELL, who had again commenced to drive the enemy.

About three o'clock in the afternoon Gen. GRANT rode to the left, where the fresh regiments had been ordered, and finding the rebels wavering, sent a portion of his body-guard to the head of each of five regiments, and then ordered a charge across the field, himself leading, as he brandished his sword and waved them on to the crowning victory, while cannon balls were falling like hail around him.

The men followed with a shout that sounded above the roar and din of the artillery, and the rebels fled in dismay, as from a destroying avalanche, and never made another stand.

Gen. BUELL followed the retreating rebels, driving them in splendid style, and by 5½ o'clock the whole rebel army was in full retreat to Corinth, with our cavalry in hot pursuit, with what further result is not known, they not having returned up to this hour.

We have taken a large amount of their artillery and also a number of prisoners. We lost a number of our forces prisoners yesterday, among whom is Gen. PRENTISS. The number of our force taken has not been ascertained yet. It is reported at several hundred. Gen. PRENTISS was also reported as being wounded. Among the killed on the rebel side was their General-in-Chief, A. SYDNEY JOHNSTON, who was struck by a cannon ball on the afternoon of Sunday. It is further reported that Gen. BEAUREGARD had his arm shot off.

This afternoon Gens. BRAGG, BRECKINRIDGE and JACKSON were commanding the rebel forces.

Our loss in officers is very heavy. It is impossible at present to obtain their names. The following were among the number:

Brig.-Gen. W. H. WALLACE, killed.

Col. PEGRAM, Acting-Brigadier-General, killed.

Col. ELLIS, Tenth Illinois, killed.

Maj. GODDARD, Fifteenth Illinois, killed.

Lieut. CANFIELD, Seventy-second Ohio, mortally wounded, since dead.

Lieut.-Col. KYLE, Forty-first Indiana, mortally wounded.

Col. DAVIS, Forty-sixth Illinois, mortally wounded.

Gen. W. T. SHERMAN, wounded in the hand by a cannon ball.

Col. SWEENY, Fifty-second Illinois, Acting Brigadier-General, wounded. Received two shots in his only remaining arm, having lost one in Mexico; also a shot in one of his legs. Col. SWEENY kept the field until the close of the fight, exciting the admiration of the whole army.

Col. DAVE STUART, Fifty-fifth Illinois, Acting Brigadier-General, shot through the breast on Sunday, returned to the field on Monday.

Col. CHAS. CRAFTS, Thirty-first Illinois, Acting Brigadier-General, shot through the right shoulder, not dangerously.

Col. HAYNE, of the Forty-eighth Illinois, wounded slightly.

Col. C. McKENNY of the Seventeenth Kentucky, wounded slightly.

Lieut.-Col. STOUT, of the Eighteenth Kentucky, wounded slightly.

Lieut.-Col. MORGAN, of the Twenty-fifth Indiana, wounded badly in the head.

Col. MASON, of the Seventy-first Ohio, wounded slightly.

Maj. EATON, of the Eighteenth Illinois, (Acting Colonel,) wounded fatally.

Maj. NEVINS, of the Eleventh Illinois, wounded slightly.

Capt. IRVING W. CARSON, Gen. GRANT's scout, head shot off by a cannon ball.

Capt. PRESTON MORTON, wounded mortally—since dead.

Capt. DILLON, of the Eighteenth Illinois, killed.

Capt. MACE, of the Fifth Illinois, killed.

Capt. CARTER, of the Eleventh Illinois, killed.

Maj. PAGE, Fifty-seventh Illinois, killed.

Gen. GRANT and staff were in the field, riding along the lines in the thickest of the enemy's fire during the entire two days of the battle, and all slept on the ground Sunday night, during a heavy rain. On several occasions Gen. GRANT got within range of the enemy's guns, and was discovered and fired upon.

Lieut.-Col. McPHERSON had his horse shot from under him when alongside of Gen. GRANT.

Capt. CARSON was between Gen. GRANT and your correspondent, when a cannon ball took off his head and killed and wounded several others.

Gen. SHERMAN had two horses killed under him, and Gen. McCLERNAND shared like dangers. Also Gen. HURLBURT, each of whom received bullet-holes through their clothes.

Gen. BUELL remained with his troops during the entire day, and with Gen. CRITTENDEN and Gen. NELSON, rode continually along the lines, encouraging their men.

OUR FORCES OCCUPY CORINTH.

CAIRO, Wednesday, April 9.

An officer who left Pittsburgh Landing on Monday evening reports that our forces occupy Corinth, and that Gen. Johnson's body had been found on the field.

He also confirms the report that BEAUREGARD had his arm shot off.

There have been no arrivals from the Tennessee River since early this morning. A boat is expected to-night.

THE BODY OF GEN. JOHNSTON.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 9.

The following was received at the War Department this evening:

"Gen. A. SIDNEY JOHNSTON's body was left on the battle-field, and is in our possession, as well as the bodies of a large number of other prominent officers."

BEAUREGARD AND HELL.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, April, 9.

The Democrat's special from Cairo says that the rebels were pursued by about 8,000 of our cavalry.

Rebel prisoners say that BEAUREGARD made a speech to his troops before entering the fight, saying he "would water his horse in the Tennessee River or in hell—and that the fight before them was hell unless successful."

THE HEROES OF THE BATTLE.

Sketches of Some of the Commanders at the Battle at Pittsburgh Landing, and of Some of the Killed and Wounded Officers.

The hasty dispatches that were received yesterday of killed and wounded officers are probably both incomplete and incorrect in many particulars. Indeed, some of those reported dead have already turned up, and others will doubtless do so. Under these circumstances it might be both injudicious and painful to give sketches of the officers reported fallen until the facts are definitely ascertained. We will briefly notice some of those honorably engaged in the battle, and some of the fallen, regarding whom the statements seem to be authentic. The officers in chief command were Major-Gen. GRANT, who acted so gallantly on Sunday, and Major-Gen. BUELL, who was in joint command on Monday.

MAJ.-GEN. ULYSSES S. GRANT.

Gen. GRANT is just forty years of age, is a native of Ohio, a graduate of West Point, and served honorably in the Mexican War, having been attached eleven years to the Fourth Regiment United States Infantry, serving as Second and First Lieutenant, as Quartermaster and as Captain. After his resignation he settled in Missouri, and moved from there to Illinois, in 1850. Upon the breaking out of the present war, he offered his services to Gov. YATES, and was appointed Colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois Volunteers, and served until promoted as a Brigadier-General, with commission and rank from the 17th of May, 1861. He was engaged as Colonel and Acting-Brigadier-General in several of the contests in Southeastern Missouri; and his course as Commander of the Southern District of Missouri has been thoroughly scrutinized, and among his most praiseworthy acts was the occupation of Paducah and stoppage of communication and supplies to the rebels viâ the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers. He was the planner of the battle of Belmont, and had chief command of the troops at the capture of Fort Donelson. After the latter event, a new district was created, under the denomination of the District of West Tennessee, and he was created a Major-General, and assigned to the command of it. But it was reported that he was under a cloud with the superior military authorities, and the most absurd stories were circulated as to the cause thereof. The simple fact was that there was some dissatisfaction with his "strategy" at Fort Donelson. When the expedition went up the Tennessee, he was not at first put on duty; but was very soon after assigned to the command of that heavy column. His personal bravery and dash is undoubted. He is a man of plain exterior, light hair, blue eyes, five feet nine in height, plain and retiring in his manners, firm and decisive in character, esteemed by his soldiers, never wastes a word with any one, but pays strict attention to his military duties. He is one of the hard-fighting school of Generals.

GEN. BUELL.

Gen. DON CARLOS BUELL is 42 years old, was born in Ohio, reared in Indiana, graduated at West Point, has been twenty years in the army, and his service has been almost continuous. He served with great distinction in the Mexican war, as Lieutenant, Captain and Adjutant, until at Churubusco he received a severe wound from a bullet, which passed through the upper part of his chest. At the time the present war broke out, he was a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Regular army, in California, but he was appointed a Brigadier-General by Congress, and was ordered to take command of a division of the army of the Potomac. On the resignation by Gen. ROBERT ANDERSON of the command of the Department of the Ohio, he was assigned to that important position, and it was under his eye that the magnificent army which lately marched from Bowling Green to Nashville, was raised and drilled. The various battles of Gen. GARFIELD against HUMPHREY MARSHALL, the battle of Mill Springs, where ZOLLICOFFER was killed, and various other important actions in Kentucky, were the emanations of his skill, and his military management in Kentucky was of the highest order. On the recent reconstruction of Departments in the Southwest, he was subordinated to Gen. HALLECK, but was at the same time created a Major-General. He left Nashville with his fine army a fortnight ago, and arrived at Pittsburgh Landing, at a most opportune moment to achieve a triumph for the previously wavering National arms. Gen. BUELL is remarkable for industry and energy; his coolness and self-possession are such that it is believed he could think as calmly, and form his plans as deliberately in a tempest of grape as in the quiet of his tent; and in the regular army he is esteemed as emphatically a fighting man. He is of compact frame, very deep chest, indicating great vital power, possesses almost herculean strength in his arms, and can lift prodigious weights at arm's length; has light hair and full beard; blue eyes, which are steady and unmoved in danger; carriage erect, step measured; and, in short, is such a type of man as is produced by long service in the American army.

GEN. W. H. WALLACE.

Brig.-Gen. W. H. WALLACE, who was the only General officer killed at Pittsburgh Landing, was a native of Illinois, a graduate of West Point, and, previous to the present war, had seen service on the Pacific frontier, as a Captain of the Washington Territory Mounted Volunteers, in which position he took part in the Indian War of 1855. At the opening of this war, he raised and obtained the Coloneley of the Eleventh Illinois Regiment of Volunteers. With his regiment he was at Fort Henry, and from there went to Fort Donelson, at which battle he was Acting Brigadier-General, and immediately afterward was confirmed as Brigadier-General by Congress. He was a very skillful and gallant officer, and his loss will be deeply mourned by the brave soldiers of the West.

GEN. C. F. SMITH.

Major-Gen. SMITH, who was severely wounded at the battle, is already well known to the country for his immense personal bravery at Fort Donelson. He is a Pennsylvanian, graduated at West Point in 1825, and held successively several responsible positions in the Academy until 1843. He went to Mexico as Captain, but, for various gallant acts, was soon breveted Colonel. In 1854 he received regular promotion as Major of the First Artillery, and in 1855 was made Lieutenant-Colonel of the Tenth Infantry, which rank he held up to the opening of the war. He then received a commission as Brigadier-General, and was appointed to the command of the forces at Paducah, Kentucky. Various preposterous charges of disloyalty were here brought against him by personal enemies, but all these he has since disproved in a most splendid manner.

COL. T. W. SWEENEY.

Col. SWEENEY, whose conspicuous gallantry is mentioned in the dispatches, is THOMAS W. SWEENEY, Captain of Co. D, Second United States Infantry. He is a native of Ireland, but has been long resident in this country, and when war was declared between the United States and Mexico he was one of the first to volunteer his services. He served with great distinction in various engagements, as Second Lieutenant in a New-York volunteer regiment, and was seriously wounded, losing his right arm. As a reward for his services, he had the option of receiving either a pension or a commission in the regular army, and immediately chose the latter, and was, accordingly, appointed Second Lieutenant in the Second Infantry, March 3, 1848, and ordered to report for duty on Governor's Island, where he remained some months. Since then he has served with his regiment in various parts of the frontiers, and has the reputation, among the regulars, of being a good soldier, but a strict disciplinarian. He was on recruiting service in this city from June, 1858, to June, 1860, when he was relieved. At the close of the year he set off to join his regiment in Nebraska. He has been in active service ever since the commencement of the rebellion, and has previously distinguished himself under the lamented Gen. LYON, in Missouri, where he acted as Brigadier-General.

THE REBEL GENERAL KILLED.

GEN. ALBERT SIDNEY JOHNSTON.

Gen. JOHNSTON, the bogus report of whose capture at Fort Donelson gave him a biographical fame two months ago, is now certainly disposed of at last, as his dead body is in our hands. He was one of the five rebel "Generals," the other four being BEAUREGARD, LEE, COOPER and JOE JOHNSTON. He was for half a year commander of the rebel Department of Kentucky, with his headquarters at Bowling Green, which famous stronghold he evacuated six weeks ago. He is 60 years of age, a native of Kentucky, and graduated at West Point in 1826. He was engaged in the Black Hawk war, in the Texan war of independence, in the Mexican war, and in the war against the Mormons. He was Brigade-General in command of the Military District of Utah, and at the opening of this rebellion, was in command of the Department of the Pacific. Shortly after the rebellion got under way, his loyalty was suspected, and Gen. SUMNER was sent out to supersede him. Before Gen. SUMNER reached California, JOHNSTON had left to join the rebels. For fear of being caught, he took the overland route, with three or four companions, on mules, and passed through Arizona and Texas, and thence to Richmond. At first he was appointed to a rebel command on the Potomac; but upon the great importance of the Western Department being seen by JEFF. DAVIS, he was appointed to take chief command at Bowling Green. He did everything to strengthen that position, and bring as large a force as could be got for its defence. But, on being outflanked by our advance up the Cumberland, he incontinently deserted his stronghold, fled to Nashville, from thence to Decatur, and from thence to Corinth, and now has fallen—a traitor to his native State and to his country. JOHNSTON was a little over six feet high, of a large, bony, sinewy frame, with a grave, gaunt and thoughtful face; of quiet, unassuming manners—forming, in all, a soldier of very imposing appearance. He was considered by military men the ablest General, for command, in the rebel service, and his loss will be a severe blow to the tottering rebellion.

RELEASE OF STATE PRISONERS.

BOSTON, Wednesday, April 9.

The Commissioners have ordered the release of the following Members of the late Maryland Legislature from Fort Warren: Hon. E. G. Kilbourne, of Ann Arundel County, Speaker of the House of Delegates; Josiah H. Gordon, of Alleghany County; Dr. Charles McGill, of Washington County; Clark J. Durant, of St. Mary's County; Dr. Mills, of Carroll County; and Messrs. Claggett, of Frederick, and Jones, of Talbot County.

OPERATIONS ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

Commodore Foote's Official Report of what he Found at Island Ten.

Seventeen Officers and Three Hundred and Sixty-eight Privates Captured.

Four Rebel Steamers, Seventy Heavy Cannon, and Immense Quantities of Provisions and Ammunition Taken.

Two Steamers and the Gunboat Grampus Sunk by the Rebels.

The Great Floating Battery Found Ashore.

DETAILS OF PRELIMINARY OPERATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 9.

The following was received at the Navy Department this morning:

FLAGSHIP BENTON, ISLAND No. 10,
April 8, (viâ Cairo.)

Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy:

I have to inform the Department that since I sent the telegram last night, announcing the surrender to me of Island No. 10, possession has been taken of both the Island and the works upon the Tennessee shore, by the gunboats, and the troops under command of Gen. BUFORD. Seventeen officers and three hundred and sixty-eight privates besides one hundred of their sick, and one hundred men employed on board the transports, are in our hands unconditionally prisoners of war. I have caused hasty examination to be made of the forts, batteries, and munitions of war captured. There are eleven earthworks, with seventy heavy cannon, varying in calibre from 32 to 100-pounders rifled. The magazines are well supplied with powder, and there are large quantities of shot and shell, and other munititions of war, and also great quantities of provisions. Four steamers afloat have fallen into our hands, and two others, with the rebel gunboat Grampus, are sunk, but will be easily raised. The floating battery of sixteen heavy guns, turned adrift by the rebels, is said to be lying on the Missouri shore, below New-Madrid. The enemy upon the mainland appear to have fled with great precipitation after dark last night, leaving in many cases half prepared meals in their quarters, and there seems to have been no concert of action between the rebels upon the Island and those occupying the shore, but the latter fled, leaving the former to their fate. These works, erected with the highest engineering skill, are of great strength, and with their natural advantages would have been impregnable if defended by men fighting in a better cause. A combined attack of the naval and land forces would have taken place this afternoon or to-morrow morning had not the rebels so hastily abandoned their stronghold; to mature the plans of attack having absolutely required twenty-three days of preparation. Gen. POPE is momentarily expected to arrive with his army at this point, he having successfully crossed the river yesterday under a heavy fire, which, no doubt led to to the hasty abandonment of the works last night. I am unofficially informed that the two gunboats which so gallantly ran the fire of the rebel batteries a few nights since, yesterday attacked and reduced a fort of the enemy opposite, dismounting eight heavy guns.

The following is a copy of the order of Gen. McCALL on assuming command of the rebel forces on the 5th inst.:

SOLDIERS: We are strangers, commander and commanded, each to the other; let me tell you who I am. I am a General made by BEAUREGARD, a General selected by BEAUREGARD and BRAGG for this command when they knew it was in peril; they have known me for twenty years; together we have stood on the fields of Mexico; give them your confidence now; give it to me when I have earned it. Soldiers, the Mississippi Valley is intrusted to your courage, to your discipline, to your patience. Exhibit the vigilance and coolness of last night and hold it.

(Signed) W. D. McCALL,
Brigadier-General Commanding.

I regret that the painful condition of my feet still requiring me to use crutches, prevented me from making a personal examination of the works; I was, therefore, compelled to delegate Lieut.-Com. S. PHELPS, of the Flag-ship Benton.

A. H. FOOTE, Flag-Officer,
Commanding Naval Forces.

COMMODORE FOOTE CONGRATULATED BY SECRETARY WELLES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 9.

The following congratulatory letter was sent to-day to Flag-officer FOOTE by telegraph:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Wednesday, April 9.

Flag-officer A. H. Foote, Commanding Gunboats on Western Waters:

SIR: A nation's thanks are due you and the brave officers and men of the flotilla on the Mississippi, whose labors and gallantry at Island No. 10, which surrendered to you yesterday, have for weeks been watched with intense interest. Your triumph is not the less appreciated because it was protracted, and finally bloodless.

To that Being who has protected you through so many perils, and carried you onward to successive victories, be the praises for his continued goodness to our country, and especially for this last great success of our arms.

Let the congratulations to yourself and your command, be also extended to the officers and soldiers who coöperated with you.

GIDEON WELLES, Secretary of the Navy.

ABOVE ISLAND No. 10, Saturday, April 5, 1862.

My last letter gave you the particulars of a gallant affair on the part of our troops, in spiking the most formidable rebel battery at this place—an operation whose daring has scarcely ever, until yesterday, been equaled, and which stamps the impress of [illegible] upon every man who was engaged in it. Gallant as was this, it has been equaled, if not excelled, in the enterprise by which the Carondelet was, last evening, run by the rebel guns, and moored in com-

Particulars of the Late Reconnoissance to Stafford Court-house.

Gen. Sickles Relieved of His Command by Gen. Hooker.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LIVERPOOL POINT, Saturday, April 5, 1862.

Gen. SICKLES received orders from Gen. HOOKER to make a reconnoissance to Stafford Court-house on last Tuesday.

The force taken over consisted of a regiment of picked men from the five regiments of SICKLES' Brigade.

I accompanied Gen. SICKLES in the capacity of volunteer aid. The troops arrived at Liverpool Point early on Tuesday evening, and immediately commenced embarking on board of the steamer Stepping Stones, belonging to the Potomac flotilla, for Shipping Point. The capacity of the Stepping Stones for transportation was limited to from three to four hundred men, each trip.

Everything went on smoothly until the second trip of the steamer, when she run aground on the shoal near Shipping Point. The gunboat Freeborn, after some hours' delay, succeeded in towing her off, and landing her troops safely; returning, she took on board the horses and the remaining portion of the expeditionary force. Some difficulty occurred in landing the horses at Shipping Point, owing to the steamer not being able to approach the bluff from the low state of the water, and it was supposed we would be compelled to leave our horses behind. Fortunately, before the troops started for the interior, the horses were gotten off successfully, and the General, his staff, and a portion of the field officers were soon mounted and on their way through the valley leading from the Shipping Point batteries to Dumfries. On reaching a point about five miles from Shipping Point, we turned into the road leading to Aquia and Stafford Court-house, leaving Dumfries on our right. The roads were anything but good. The mud and small streams of water retarded our march a little. The men, full of determination, marched along enthusiastically, not seeming to care about the state of the roads, nor uttering any complaints. After reaching the deserted village of Aquia, about a mile the other side the column rested. The skirmishers sent out encountered a force of the enemy's cavalry, who immediately retreated over the mountains, exchanging shots with the skirmishers as they left. Several horses were captured, and contrabands brought in to the presence of the General, who was seated on the top of a rail fence, talking to some of his officers. The General questioned them relative to the force in the vicinity, and they all agreed in their statements. They represented there were from six to eight hundred cavalry at Stafford Court-house. At Brooks' Station, two and a half miles from Stafford, they said the enemy had a regiment of infantry twelve hundred strong, and six field-pieces. One old negro gave the General very truthful information. When the examination was finished the General handed the negro some silver change, asking him, at the same time, how long it was since he had seen any like it. The negro, scratching his head, replied:

"My golly, Massa, I can't remember back so far."

We had rested about an hour, when the order to advance was given. The rebel cavalry, as we ascended the hill, commenced a scattering fire on the advance corps. The skirmishers fired in return, emptying several saddles. The rebels picked up their wounded comrades and rode away through the woods. Their horses fell into our hands. When within three miles of Stafford Court-house the rebel cavalry formed in line of battle on a level piece of ground, just in front of a dense wood. On the approach of our forces, they commenced firing at us. The order was passed along the line, "Double-quick." With yells, they rushed up, throwing away their knapsacks, overcoats, and every article cumbersome, to the front, just in time to see the battle line of the rebels broken, retreating through the woods in all directions. We had two men wounded, one severely in the leg. The rebels lost some, but how many it was impossible to say, as the enemy invariably carried those who fell with them in their retreat. One of the rebels' balls passed close to the General's head. His position was one of continual exposure, for he constantly rode at the head of his column. During the progress of the skirmishing, his orders were given in a clear tone, void of the slightest excitement.

At a house on the road, not far from Stafford, we found the table set for dinner for five persons, who proved to be rebel officers. In their haste of departure they left swords, pistols and saddlebags behind, as well as a good dinner. The house was cleared of secesh articles and the march continued to the town of Stafford, where we arrived at 4 P. M. The cavalry retreated as we appeared, setting fire to the place. Gen. SICKLES gave orders for his main column to rest on the brow of the hill, and with two or three officers, rode in the town. The General ordered the fires to be extinguished, to prevent the conflagration from spreading, which the troops succeeded in doing. The enemy had commenced destroying their stores two hours before our arrival, and consequently they were destroyed. The private stores in the town, however, were ample to feed ten times our number, and were supplied to our men within half an hour after our occupancy of the place. No male citizen was to be seen. The women and children were left to defend their homes by the cowardly chivalry. One old lady begged an officer not to kill her, with piteous sobs. He assured her she was safer under the Union flag than under that of the stars and bars. The old lady then said she read in the Fredericksburgh paper that the Yankees always killed every one they took prisoner, and appeared highly delighted when assured to the contrary. The contents of the Court-house and several houses and stores were taken by the soldiers. Every one of them was anxious to bring away some memento of their visit, and as the town had the appearance of being fired and deserted, it was partially excusable in their pillaging the houses. As soon as Gen. SICKLES' heard of some of his men entering a private house, he sent the most peremptory orders to his Provost-marshal to protect the property of citizens at all hazards.

Skirmishers sent out toward Brooks' Station reported the advance of the enemy's forces to protect their cavalry, giving their numbers at upward of 2,000, with a battery of artillery. The rebel forces came within a mile of Stafford, but retired, thinking, probably, we out-numbered them. After remaining three hours in Stafford, camp-fires were built on the hills, and our force, tired and weary as they were, took up their march to Shipping Point. The camp-fires had the effect of deceiving the enemy, who, having a superior force, intended attacking us during the night. One citizen of Falmouth, who had a son in the Confederate army, and who himself is a bitter Secessionist, was captured on the road to Brooks' Station and brought in. On the road back, the men would drop down and fall asleep, whenever it became necessary to halt; but when the order was given "Forward," they took their positions in the ranks. Gen. SICKLES, with part of his force, arrived at Shipping Point; the other portion came in at Brent's House, opposite Liverpool Point. The marching-time made to Stafford Court-house and returning, a distance of forty-seven miles, was accomplished in seventeen hours. This excels any march ever made by the army of the Potomac, and Gen. SICKELS deserves the unanimous confirmation of his appointment, by this successful proof of his soldierly qualifications.

Forty horses, arms and a lot of prisoners were brought in with us. Only one of the prisoners expressed Union sentiments. They will be sent to Washington as soon as possible. The returns of the Commanders of the different regiments have not as yet come in to the General, and I cannot state whether any of our men are missing. There may be a few left behind.

P. S.—I have since learned through Assistant-Adjutant-Gen. PALMER that the troops comprising the corps taken to Stafford have all returned.

LIVERPOOL POINT, Sunday, April 6, 1862.

Gen. SICKLES received this morning an order from Gen. HOOKER depriving him of his command. It was supposed by almost every one that the President intended allowing him an opportunity to lead his men in the first action; and, from its results, judge of his qualifications for the position of Brigadier-General. No such chance, however, has been allotted to him, and he returns to Washington this afternoon on the gunboat Freeborn, to see the President.

He has still left one of the most brilliant and successful proofs of ability, to show his competency as a commander. I allude to his recent march to Stafford Court-house, forty-seven miles, without losing a man, and capturing a number of prisoners, arms, horses, &c., a march accomplished in seventeen hours, over the worst mountain roads.

As soon as the officers and men connected with his brigade heard of the order recalling him, they manifested, unanimously, a feeling of the deepest regret in parting with their old commander, who, since its inception, toiled studiously and ceaselessly to accomplish its perfection.

I inclose a copy of the General's farewell to his troops.

Col. TAYLOR, by order of Gen. HOOKER, assumes command of the brigade.

GEN. SICKLES' PROTEST AGAINST HIS SUPERSEDURE.

HEADQUARTERS EXCELSIOR BRIGADE,
SECOND HOOKER'S DIVISION,
ON BOARD U. S. TRANSPORT ELM CITY,
OFF LIVERPOOL POINT, April 6, 1862.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Special Orders No. 132, announcing that by command of Brig.-Gen. HOOKER, I am relieved from duty in the Second Brigade. The reason assigned is that my appointment of Brigadier-General has been revoked.

I respectfully bring to the notice of the Brigadier-General commanding the Division, the fact—of which I cannot presume him to be ignorant—that I am the senior Colonel of the Brigade, having been mustered into service as Colonel of the First Regiment on the 29th of June, 1861, which muster was afterward duly confirmed by the letter of appointment of the President of the United States.

This fact was officially made known to the division commander, in a recent communication from myself on the 27th ultimo, addressed through him to Brig.-Gen. SETH WILLIAMS, Assistant Adjutant-General, Army of the Potomac.

Until superseded in command by a Brigadier-General regularly assigned to duty with this Brigade, I respectfully claim that I am entitled to the command as the senior officer present.

For these reasons I respectfully protest against Special Orders No. 132 as illegal, unauthorized and unjust. I shall obey them—since obedience to superior authority is the first duty of a soldier—and shall avail myself of my right to appeal for redress to the General commanding this army.

I am, Captain, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,
D. E. SICKLES,
Colonel First Regiment U. S. Volunteers.

CAPT. JOSEPH DICKINSON, Assist. Adj.-General.

GEN. SICKLES' FAREWELL TO HIS SOLDIERS.

HEADQUARTERS EXCELSIOR BRIGADE,
SECOND HOOKER'S DIVISION, ON BOARD U. S.
TRANSPORT "ELM CITY," April 6, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 6.—SOLDIERS: Special Orders No. 132 will announce to you that I am relieved from further duty in this Brigade, by order of the Brigadier-General commanding the Division.

My last act of duty is to bid you farewell. After a year of service with you, it is hard to yield to the necessity which separates me from so many brave and devoted companions-in-arms, endeared to me by more than ordinary ties.

While protesting that it is unlawful and unjust, I obey this command, because obedience to superior authority is the first duty of a soldier.

It is my earnest hope that a prompt appeal for redress, to the General commanding the army, will permit me to share with you the honors of the campaign now so auspiciously begun.

Whether we are separated for a day or forever, the fervent wishes of my heart will follow your fortunes on every field. You have waited patiently for the hour now at hand, when the Army of the Potomac will move upon the strongholds of the enemy.

Your discipline, courage and bearing will place you among the foremost of our legions. The glory which surely awaits you will help to reconcile me to the pain it costs me to say again—Farewell!

By command of Brig.-Gen. D. E. SICKLES.
J. S. PALMER, Jr., Aid-de-Camp and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Notes of Prize Decisions.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

ACT OF JULY 13, 1861.—PLEADING.

The United vs. The Schooner Ned.—This was a proceeding to forfeit the vessel under the provisions of the Act of July 13, 1861, as being owned in part by citizens of one of the insurrectionary States, a share of her belonging to Ely Murray, of Wilmington, N. C. Elzy F. Powell intervened by claim and answer for himself, Ely Murray and others, alleging that they were owners and in possession of the vessel, and embodying six specific exceptions, amounting to special demurrers, to the libel, and on the pleadings and the exemplification of the register of the vessel, offered in evidence by the District-Attorney, the case was brought to a hearing. It appeared from these that at the time of the seizure she was in possession of the claimants as owners, and that Murray was alleged to be a resident of North Carolina.

Held by the Court—That the information sets forth all the particulars necessary to bring the vessel within the provisions of the act of July 13, 1861.

That the act itself, and the public acts of the Government in relation to the existing rebellion within the United States, afford judicial notice that the matter comes within the provision of that statute.

That the act calls for the forfeiture of the interest of the rebel owners in the vessel, if it is constitutional.

That the Court has already decided it to be constitutional.

Therefore, the exceptions are overruled, and judgment is rendered in favor of the libelants forfeiting one quarter of her, and the District-Attorney having remitted all claim to the other three-fourths, as belonging to loyal citizens, that share of the proceeds is ordered to be restored to the claimants thereof.

For the United States, Mr. Woodford; for claimants, Mr. Ridgway.

PRIZE—WHAT EVIDENCE NECESSARY.

The United States vs. The Cargo of the Ship Thomas Watson.—This was a proceeding to condemn as prize a quantity of merchandise alleged to be part of the cargo of the ship Thomas Watson, which, in attempting to violate the blockade, was run ashore, set on fire and burned, and this portion of her cargo was taken from her by the naval forces of the United States and brought to this port, where it was libeled as prize. No one intervened to claim it.

Held by the Court—That although in case of absolute necessity, proceedings in prize may be prosecuted to effect without the observance of the formalities required by the prize rules, and the attendance and testimony of witnesses from the delinquent ship may be dispensed with, adequate proof must be supplied aliunde of the delictum charged to enable the Court to sustain the accusation.

That there is no legal proof furnished that the lost vessel committed the offence charged, or that the goods were part of her cargo.

The libelants are allowed time to furnish evidence of these facts, and if they fail to furnish it within thirty days the libel must be dismissed.

For the United States, Mr. Woodford.

PRIZE—ENEMY'S PROPERTY—VIOLATION OF BLOCKADE—IRREGULAR PROOF.

The United States vs. The Schooner Henry Middleton and her Cargo.—This was a proceeding to forfeit the vessel as a prize. She was captured off the coast of South Carolina by the Vandalia, Aug. 21, 1861. The vessel and cargo were owned in Charleston, South Carolina, and sailed thence for Liverpool, between Aug. 6 and 21. The master of the vessel knew the port was blockaded. Her documents were furnished her by the rebel Government, at Charleston, and she sailed under the rebel flag. When she was chased by the Vandalia, her master threw overboard the private letters of shippers of the cargo, and also his deck load to avoid capture. None of the officers or crew were sent into port with the prize, nor were they produced with her to be examined as witnesses.

Held by the Court—That this irregularity is substantially cured by the subsequent appearance and examination of the master of the schooner, and moreover no one appears to contest the validity and regularity of the capture.

Vessel and cargo forfeited for violation of the blockade, and also as enemy's property.

For the United States, Mr. Woodford.

PRIZE—VIOLATION OF BLOCKADE.

The United States vs. The Cargo of the Schooner Edward Barnard.—This was also a proceeding in prize. The schooner was captured in the Gulf of Mexico on Oct. 15, by the South Carolina—she and her cargo being enemy's property, and having also intentionally violated the blockade of Mobile.

The vessel was afterward stranded by stress of weather, and her cargo was transhipped to this port. The master destroyed private letters on board when he gave up his vessel to the captors. No defence was interposed.

Decree of condemnation and forfeiture as prize.

For the United States, Mr. Woodford.

PRIZE—WHAT EVIDENCE NECESSARY.

The United States vs. The Cargo of the Schooner Sarah and Caroline.—The libel in this case alleged that the schooner, with a cargo of sixty barrels of turpentine, was captured by the Bienville, on Dec. 11, off the mouth of the St. Johns River, Florida. The schooner was reported unseaworthy to be navigated to a Northern port in the Winter season, and her cargo was transhipped.

The papers on the vessel were authenticated by the rebel authorities of Florida, and showed that she and her cargo were enemy's property. But no legal proof was laid before the Court of the actual capture of the same at sea, nor of any physical or moral inability to produce evidence of it.

Decree of condemnation deferred, therefore, until such evidence is furnished or a lawful excuse given for the admission of secondary proofs.

But as no one appeared in the suit, the cargo is ordered to be sold, and the proceeds brought into Court, to abide its further order.

For the United States, Mr. Woodford.

United States District Court.

COLLISION BETWEEN STEAMER AND SAILING VESSEL—DUTY OF STEAMER.

Before Judge Shipman.

The Propeller Sophia, &c., vs. John T. Messereau.—This libel, in rem., is brought by John T. Messereau, owner of the sloop David D. Crane, to recover damages suffered by the sloop in a collision with the propeller in the Kills, between Staten Island and the New-Jersey shore, on the 10th day of June, 1859.

The sloop was bound from the Palisades to Elizabethport, and the propeller was on her voyage from Philadelphia to New-York. The wind was blowing fresh at the time down the Kills toward New-York Bay, and the tide was ebb, setting with a pretty strong current in the same direction. The collision occurred about 11 o'clock in the morning, and while the propeller was moving with considerable speed. The sloop was under single reef mainsail and jib, heavily loaded with stone, and was beating against wind and tide.

The Captain of the propeller states that when he first saw the sloop she was standing on her long tack toward Bergen Point; that she did not continue on that tack as long as she might, and as long as he had a right to expect she would; but that she suddenly went in stays, and stood for the Staten Island shore, on her short tack. He states that when she went in stays for this latter tack she was rather astern of the propeller, and that if she had kept her course close she would have passed to the westward of and under the stern of the propeller—but that, on the contrary, she kept away, as if making a long instead of a short tack toward Staten Island, thereby coming across the bows of the propeller. That when he saw the course of the sloop he slowed and stopped his engine, and ported his helm, thereby endeavoring to avoid the collision.

Now, I think, the evidence clearly shows that the Captain of the propeller both mistook the position of the sloop and his duty toward her, and that he failed in his duty toward her in several important and decisive particulars.

1. I think he was bound to anticipate that the sloop would go in stays and come on to her short tack near the spot where she did.

2. That if the vessels had occupied the relative positions which he claims they did when the sloop went in stays for her short tack, the collision would have been impossible, for the steamer, with her speed, as stated by him, would have passed the point of collision before the sloop could have reached it.

3. That, seeing this sailing vessel beating up a narrow channel against wind and tide, the propeller, going in the opposite direction, with the wind and tide in her favor, under the power of steam, should have had her speed effectually checked, and, if necessary, stopped, in season to have passed the sloop in safety.

4. It is evident from the whole evidence, including that of the captain of the propeller, that he did not accurately calculate the position of the sloop, the necessary course which she must take on her short tack, and the inevitable effect of the wind and tide in carrying her on this tack to the eastward, down the Kills, and that he erroneously supposed he could safely pass to the southward of her; and that in attempting to do so, the collision occurred through the fault of the propeller, and without fault on the part of the sloop.

It follows from these conclusions, that a decree must be entered for the libelants, and an order of reference to ascertain the damages.

For libelant, Mr. Haskett; for claimant, Messrs. Benedict, Burr & Benedict.

Accommodation Paper—A Defence of Usury.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice White.

The Chatham Bank vs. Frederick B. Betts et al.—This was an action on a promissory note, to recover the sum of $2,350. The defence set up by defendant Betts, who alone appeared to defend, was that in 1861 he made the note in suit and delivered it to the defendant, Archibald A. Thomas, as an accommodation note, and without any consideration. That Thomas subsequently entered into an agreement with the defendant Samuel B. Potter, by which Potter gave an usurious rate of interest and agreed to pay Thomas for the note the sum of $150, more than its face. It was also alleged in defendant's answer, that plaintiffs were not the real parties in interest, but that the suit was commenced and prosecuted at the instance of and for the benefit of the defendant, Potter, who, as alleged, was the real party in interest; and the defendant alleged that he had an equitable set-off to the note as against Potter.

It was argued on the part of the plaintiffs that the fact that the note was transferred from Thomas to Potter at an usurious rate of interest, did not constitute a defence of which the defendant, Betts, could avail himself. The trial resulted in favor of the plaintiff for the sum claimed.

E. C. D. Kittridge for plaintiffs; Larned and Warren for defendants.

The Alleged Destruction of a Lease—Measure of Damages.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Daly.

George Stein vs. Henry Neil.—This was an action to recover damages for the alleged destruction of a lease, whereby the plaintiff claimed he lost possession of a house in Hamilton-street which, as claimed, he had rented from May 1, 1860, for five years, from the defendant, at $400 per annum. The plaintiff averred that the defendant sent for the lease, under the pretence of wishing to make a copy of it. But that, when in his possession, he destroyed it, and subsequently rented the premises to other parties, thereby depriving the plaintiff of the benefit of his lease. The plaintiff laid his damages at $3,000. The defendant denied the making of the lease, and set up that even were there a lease, that the plaintiff could not recover more than the sum total of the rent. The jury, after canvassing the evidence, returned a verdict for the defendant.

Isaac V. Van Winkle, for plaintiff; Cyrus Lawton, for defendant.

Transportation—Liability of Shipmasters.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Hilton.

Thos. Moyo vs. Lewis Brosi.—This case was stated in the TIMES of yesterday. The plaintiff sought to recover the value of freightage upon several casks of wine, brought to this port from Rotterdam in his ship, the Golden Rule. The defence was that 150 gallons of the wine were lost by the breaking of the casks containing it, through the defective system of stowage. The defence set up the value of this wine as a counter claim. The plaintiff replied that by the bill of lading he was not to be accountable for leakage, and that the weight and contents of the casks were unknown.

The trial now resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for six cents.

Court of General Sessions.

In this Court yesterday, Recorder HOFFMAN passed sentence upon the following persons, previously convicted: John Kelly, for petit larceny, Penitentiary six months; William Collins, for petit larceny, Penitentiary six months; John O'Brien, for petit larceny, Penitentiary four months; Michael Kutz, for petit larceny, City Prison one day; Margaret Smith, for grand larceny, House of Refuge; Charles Henderson, for attempt at grand larceny, State Prison two years and six months; John Wallace, for attempt at grand larceny, Penitentiary one year; Andrew Robb, for petit larceny, Penitentiary six months.

Legal Notices.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

The Calendar of one-hour causes for this Term will be called on Thursday, April 17, instead of the last Friday of the Term. By the Court.

N. JARVIS, Jr., Clerk.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

There will be no calendar of short causes made up in this Court until Monday, April 21, on which day the entire calendar of short causes remaining in the two branches of the Court, will be taken up and continued until disposed of.

United States District Attorney's Office.

In view of the pressure caused by legal business, growing out of the war, the Secretary of the Interior has authorized the appointment of an additional assistant. Mr. Smith has accordingly promoted to the position of Assistant United States District-Attorney, Mr. George P. Andrews, late Chief Clerk, who has won the confidence of the District-Attorney and the public by close attention to the business of the office. He is a man of integrity and talent. Mr. Smith and his assistants have promptly transacted all the business arising in the District-Attorney's office during the last year, and have materially reduced the number of pending suits.

WEDNESDAY, April 9—P. M.

Government securities rose ⅛@¼ ₩ cent., and Gold declined ⅛@¼ ₩ cent., on the exciting war news of this evening. In other respects the Stock Market failed to respond to the National victories. There was a large amount of business done, but the speculators against the market were free sellers at about yesterday's prices, on the Railway Shares, while the Border State Stocks were ½@1 ₩ cent. lower. In the afternoon there was considerable excitement between the Bear and Bull speculators. The former offered New-York Central at 83, seller 30 days, and 82½, seller 60 days; while the latter bid for large amounts at 83½ ₩ cent., buyer 3 days. The other Railways were offered and bid for in about the same proportion. The business in New-York Central, after the printed list, amounted to about 2,000 shares, at 83, seller 30 days, and 83½, buyer 3 days. Erie Shares rated 37@37¼ ₩ cent. On Erie Preferred Shares the first transactions early in the forenoon were at 62 ₩ cent. The subsequent transactions were at 61½@61⅛@61 ₩ cent., ultimately closing 61½@61¼ ₩ cent. The Western shares were firmer on Illinois Central, owing to the news from the Mississippi River, Island No. 10, but on other descriptions the prices paid were almost the same as yesterday, except Prairie du Chien, which was lower at the close by ½ ₩ cent. In Pacific Mail stock the demand was again very strong, and 100⅞ ₩ cent. was paid for 500 shares cash, and 100¼, seller 30 days.

Late in the afternoon the market left off steady, at about the following rates:

The Money Market works with increased ease at 6@7 ₩ cent. The Circulation of the City as well as of the Country Banks, is increasing in proportion to the Circulation of United States Notes, thus directly reversing the apprehension of some of our local Bank officers before the passage of the Act of Congress of Feb. 25, that the United States Notes of legal tender would supersede or greatly diminish our State Bank Currency. The 7.30 ₩ cent. Treasury Bonds are in request to-day at 99⅞@100. The Treasury Certificates, 6 ₩ cents, 12 months to run, are wanted at 96⅛ ₩ cent. Exchange for the Cunard steamer this morning left off 112½ ₩ cent. The tendency of rates since the sailing of the steamer is, if anything, to rather easier figures, owing to the decline in Gold.

The business of the Illinois Central Railroad for March was as follows:

The Chicago Post, of Sunday last, says:

"The week just closing has been one of the most active ever witnessed by the wholesale merchants of Chicago. The dry goods, clothing, and boot and shoe houses have been thronged from morning until late at night with customers from all parts of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska, a large majority of whom visit Chicago for the first time for the purpose of buying goods. All express themselves well pleased with their visit, and many of them express surprise at the large stocks of goods which they find here, and the low prices at which they are able to buy. All the leading articles of dry goods are held firm, and the leading staples of cotton goods have advanced 5@10 ₩ cent. during the past ten days. The demand for money continues very small, and we have no change to note. The Banks are anxiously waiting for a resumption of lake navigation to the East, when they hope to find profitable employment for their surplus capital. Eastern Exchange is easy at ¼ ₩ cent. selling, and buying at par. Gold steady, with but little demand. The Brokers are buying at 1¼@1½ ₩ cent., and selling at 2 ₩ cent. premium. There has been considerable demand for Chicago City Bonds during the week. A number of sales have been reported at 90c."

And the Chicago Tribune of Monday remarks:

"The slight improvement apparent in monetary affairs for the past two days was still more strikingly manifest to-day, and our bankers begin to wear more cheerful faces. They are prepared for all that come—even if they be legion. Exchange rates have undergone no change. The buying is par@⅛, selling ¼, with an additional ⅛ when it can be got. Gold is a little stiffer, but there is no change in quotations—buying 1¼@1½, selling 1¾@2. The demand is light. Demand Treasury Notes are quoted at ¼ premium to buyers. The Banks take them at par. Treasury Certificates, payable in one year or sooner, at the option of the Government, and bearing 6 ₩ cent. interest, were quite plenty on the street this morning, but we heard of no sales. Buyers offer 96."

The St. Louis Republican, of the 7th inst. observes:

There has been through the week no change in rates of Exchange and United States Demand notes, although both have grown weaker to the close. Gold has continued to be held more firmly, and rose full 1 ₩ cent. To-day the selling rate stood stiff at 3 ₩ cent. The ruling rate of Exchange has not exceeded ¼ premium, nor of Treasury notes ⅛ premium. There is really but very little difference between them and bankable funds. Most of the bankers, we believe, in treating with their customers, put the two at par. We quote:

| | Buying. | Selling. |
|---|---|---|
| Exchange.............................. | par | ¼ |
| Treasury Notes........................ | par | ⅛ |
| Gold.................................. | 2½ | 3 |

In the usual weekly review of finance and business in Boston, the Boston Post, of yesterday, states:

"Business in stocks and money for the past week has not amounted to much; the absence of any stirring news from the army and navy has prevented any important movements in a speculative way, either for a rise or a fall, and the market has been very dull; prices have settled a little, with no symptoms of a reaction until Saturday, when the market closed firm. Government Securities have declined, and lowest point touched for the coupon sixes of 1881 was 92⅞; the market has been supplied with Government certificates of indebtedness, which have been selling at a price which gives purchasers from 9 to 10 ₩ cent. for their investment, and this has interfered with dealings in other Government issues, as the amount of certificates to be issued is limited to $50,000,000, and as nearly this amount has already been issued, we suppose the current of investment will soon return to the Coupons, and to the 7 3-10 Notes. There is no change to note in the price of money, or in the demand for it; at six per cent. it is abundant on good security, and the demand at the banks is limited. The demand notes now nearly ready, when they come into circulation, will create greater abundance, and no doubt will foster a further speculation in stocks; with this view, and with confidence in the results of military movements in Virginia and the Southwest, the bulls hold on to stocks recently bought with great firmness. Foreign exchange has advanced during the week, and closed for Saturday's steamer firm, at 112 to 112¼."

THE HORSE MARKET.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, April 9, 1862.

There remained unsold at the Twenty-fourth-street Stables the beginning of the week, 483 head. Sales of the week have been limited in fine stock, no first class pairs sold. Some plain pairs sold at $350@$450 ₩ pair; good single horses, for business and road, sold at $175@$200; those with speed, $220@$400; a few shippers sold at $95 ₩ head. The demand for first-class draught-horses has been light. Several good ones on hand. We noticed several good saddle horses in the street. Railroad and Omnibus Companies are buying but a few, at last week's prices. Government has purchased 130 head the past week, at an average of $80 ₩ head. They were mostly Canadian ponies. Sales for the week amount to 227 head, leaving on hand 380 head. The arrivals the past week are from Western New-York, and are mostly a good class.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The battle at Pittsburgh, Tenn., a few miles from the rebel position at Corinth, brief dispatches regarding which were published in our first edition yesterday, and fuller details of which appeared in extra editions, proves to have been one of the first magnitude in its progress and results. It was brought on by the rebels themselves, early on Sunday morning, and continued, with an intermission lasting only through the darkness of Sunday night, until late in the afternoon of Monday. The collision of the two armies was hurried by the desire of the rebel leaders to engage our Southwestern army in detail instead of in mass—the necessity, in fact, of defeating Gen. Grant before he could be joined by Gen. Buell. Dispatches received from Louisville informs us that Beauregard left Corinth with his command for Purdy, a few miles west of Pittsburgh, on Thursday last, and that Johnston, with his command, left on the same day for the same destination, by a different route—intending to concentrate their forces at Purdy and make an attack upon Gen. Grant on Friday or Saturday, should the state of the roads permit. Fortunately they were delayed so that the attack could not be made until Sunday, as before stated, when Gen. Buell was so near the scene of action that he was able to participate on the second day, and turn the tide of battle in our favor. The brigades of Gens. Sherman and Prentiss were first engaged, and the rebel attack was successful. Our entire force was driven back to the river, when the advance of the enemy was first checked by the fire of two of our gunboats. Gen. Grant then arrived at the scene of action with the troops from Savanna, and our men, who had been contending against fearful odds, were inspirited by the news that two Divisions of Gen. Buell's army had also arrived. The next morning our forces, now outnumbering those of the rebels, assumed the offensive, and, after a hard-fought day, succeeded in routing the enemy at every point. Our losses on the first day were heavy, and beside the killed and wounded, embraced the camp equipage at Pittsburgh and thirty-six field guns. On the second day, however, by two o'clock P. M., we had retaken the camps and batteries, and some forty of the enemy's cannon, beside a number of prisoners. A number of our men were taken prisoners on the first day, including, one report says, Gen. Prentiss. The reports of our killed, wounded and missing are doubtless much exaggerated, but it is likely the number will approach five thousand, while the enemy's losses must be much heavier, as our artillery was served upon them with terrible effect. Among their killed the name of their best General, Albert Sidney Johnston, is given.

Commodore Foote has sent to the Navy Department a more detailed report relating to the capture of Island No. 10, from which we learn that there were surrendered unconditionally prisoners of war, on the Island and the transports near it, seventeen officers and 368 privates, beside 100 sick and 100 employed on the transports. An examination of the fortifications and munitions of war has disclosed eleven earthworks, with seventy heavy cannon, varying in calibre from 32 to 100-pounders, rifled, with good supplies of powder and large quantities of shot and shell, besides provisions, etc. Four steamers were found afloat, and two others, with the rebel gunboat Grampus, were sunk, but will be raised again without much difficulty; and the great floating battery, mounting sixteen guns, having been cut adrift, was found ashore on the Missouri side below New-Madrid. The works prove to have been erected with the highest engineering skill, and are of great strength.

In reference to the great victories recently achieved by the National arms, Secretary Stanton has issued an order directing that at noon of the Sunday next following the receipt of the order, the Chaplain of each regiment of the army shall, at the head of his regiment, offer up a prayer of thanksgiving; giving the thanks and congratulations of the War Department to officers prominent in the recent important movements, and ordering a salute of one hundred guns to be fired at the Washington Navy-yard.

From Yorktown, our latest advices are to the effect that our siege operations there were progressing favorably. We shall soon, doubtless, receive the right sort of news from that quarter.

Advices from Fortress Monroe state that the rebel steamer Merrimac had come down from Norfolk as far as Craney Island, and was ready to again make her appearance in the Roads as soon as the weather should become favorable. A dispatch from Washington was read at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday announcing that the Vanderbilt and Monitor had together disabled and sunk the Merrimac, after a severe fight; but the intelligence has not been confirmed.

Advices from the Lower Potomac represent that the recent reconnoissance of Gen. Sickles to Stafford Court-house created the greatest panic at Fredericksburgh. Every vehicle there capable of transporting goods was made available, and whole families fled to Richmond, leaving everything behind. Our force was exaggerated to twenty thousand men, with six field batteries.

We have already noticed the vigorous measures adopted by Gov. Johnson to bring the rebels in Nashville to their senses. The Banner of Saturday last reports the proceedings at a joint convention of the two branches of the City Council, held to take into consideration the course of action to be pursued regarding taking the oath of allegiance. During the meeting of the Convention, Mayor Cheatham tendered his resignation of the Mayoralty, which was not accepted. Mr. Cheatham stated that it was his understanding of Gov. Johnson's policy, that if a majority of the members agreed to take the prescribed oath, they would be allowed to fill vacancies and carry on the business of the city government. Several members spoke upon the subject, the substance of their remarks being that, having received a communication from Gov. Johnson a week ago, they had met, deliberated upon the subject of its contents, and returned him a respectful reply. Not having heard from him since, at least not in any formal manner, they were unable to conceive of any other course to pursue than to adjourn, and a motion to adjourn was carried. The Banner states that it is the purpose of Gov. Johnson to bring matters to an immediate crisis, and that the city legislators will be removed at once, unless they adopt the only course open to them. The telegraph has already reported the committal of Mayor Cheatham.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, not much business of public importance was done in open session. After the presentation of petitions and memorials, the bill relating to fixing the salaries of District Attorneys was passed. The Senate then went into executive session, and subsequently adjourned.

In the House, the Senate bill to increase the efficiency of the Medical Department of the army was considered, and passed, after the adoption of some important amendments. Albert G. Higgins, of Boston, was brought before the bar of the House for contempt, in failing to answer a summons from the select Committee on Government Contracts. His excuses were considered valid, and he was discharged from arrest. The Senate's amendments of the Post-office Appropriation bill were nearly all concurred in. A slight amendment, made by the Senate to the joint resolution declaring that States desiring to emancipate their slaves should receive the coöperation of the Government, was agreed to, and the resolution was sent to the President for his approval. The Senate bill, appropriating $1,000,000 for the abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia, was then taken up and read the first time. Mr. Vallandigham, of Ohio, objected to a second reading, when the question came up on the rejection of the bill, and it was decided in the negative—93 to 45. It was then read a second time, and sent to the Committee of the Whole—that course being necessary with all bills making appropriations. The Pacific Railroad and Telegraph bill was afterward considered in Committee of the Whole until the adjournment.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate yesterday, the bill to incorporate the Brooklyn Loan Association was reported favorably; also, the bill to authorize the payment of bonds created in this City for the National defence. A bill to incorporate the New-York Exchange Company was introduced, read a third time by unanimous consent, and passed. The bill providing for the diminution of Taxes in this City, by applying for that purpose the surplus revenue, was also passed.

In the Assembly a number of bills were read a third time and passed—among them the one making it the duty of county officers and Justices of the Peace to report annually to the Boards of Supervisors of their respective counties, and the one incorporating the New-York Blind Mechanics' Association. The Susquehannah Railroad bill was passed, after an ineffectual effort to amend it. The Metropolitan Health bill was then considered, and after a debate of considerable length, it was passed, by a vote of 68 to 46.

GENERAL NEWS.

There are indications at Nashville of a decided revival in the cotton trade. One of the largest brokers recently received several wagon loads of the staple.

A rebel prisoner, who recently escaped from Camp Morton, at Indianapolis, had the hardihood to return to his home in Bowling Green, Ky. His servant reported his arrival at that place, when he was arrested and again put under confinement.

The prize steamship Magnolia, lying at the Atlantic Dock, Brooklyn, was sold yesterday, by public auction for $50,000. She was purchased by Mr. Starks W. Lewis, for the Government.

Our new Consul to Brunswick, Germany, who was confirmed on April 4, is B. Ellis Martin, not B. Ellis, as has been given.

The Stock Market was stronger for Government Stocks and easier for Gold, yesterday, on the great War news of the morning. But, in other respects, the market failed to respond to the favorable nature of the news. The Exchange Market, 112¼@112⅜ ℔ cent.

The Flour market was quite heavy yesterday, and prices were generally lower. Wheat was dull and unsettled. Corn was in good demand and was a shade firmer. Cotton was quiet. Lard, Bacon, Cut Meats and tierce Beef were in lively request at buoyant rates. Pork was lightly dealt in, as were also Coffee, Rice, Metals, Oils, Fish, Fruit, Hemp, Hides, Hops, Seeds, Spices and Foreign Liquors. The auction sales of Dry Goods were generally well attended by purchasers, including a few buyers from Western Virginia and from Nashville, Tennessee; desirable fabrics brought fair prices. Sugars were pretty actively sought after, as were also Resin and Whisky; the latter at higher rates. The changes in other branches of trade were not important. There were 481 vessels of all classes in port.

The Live Stock Markets were supplied with 4,000 beeves, 100 milch cows, 850 calves, 4,700 sheep and 12,330 hogs for the past week. The beeves were all sold before the market ordinarily closes, and prices were a shade lower than one week ago. Calves are lower, and in excess of the demand. Sheep are scarce at former rates. Hogs are a trifle lower, and nearly all sold. Fat, heavy hogs find a ready market, while light poor stock goes off very slowly.

The Coming of the Merrimac.

The Navy Department has doubtless good reasons to give for permitting the disabled Merrimac to be refitted at leisure, and to select her own time and place for another essay of her destructive powers. The Department had good reasons to give for the original loss of the vessel, along with the Norfolk Navy-yard, and for the success of its former desperate attempt. It had reasons quite as good for the successive escapes of the Sumter and the Nashville. They all, however, resolve themselves into the very simple formula, that adequate measures are not taken by the Department until the rebels have had ample opportunity to do their worst. Among those in New-York who understand such matters, quite as well as the Secretary himself, it is believed that the means instituted (partly by Government) to destroy the Merrimac, would have done the work far more effectually had they attacked her boldly at the Navy-yard, crippled and without steam, than they can do it, now, when she is repaired, newly armed, and with steam up and abundant sea-room. That these advantages are on her side is unquestionably a source of extreme alarm, not only to the people but to the Government. The latter, for fear of the monster, is unable to harbor the fleet of transports tributary to the army of the Potomac under the guns of Fortress Monroe; and the public, equally fearful, shows none of the enthusiastic satisfaction which the splendid victories on the Mississippi and Tennessee so fully warrant. Why, if our mailed champions are what they are represented to be, do they not seek their enemy, and at once terminate the general suspense?

The Siege of Yorktown.—The second siege of Yorktown threatens to rival the first in time, as it far outrivals it in magnitude. Its reduction occupied Washington's army almost a month, and Gen. McClellan's army has been already close on a week in front of the place. As the War Department thinks it prudent to shroud operations in that quarter as much as possible, thus depriving the public of the excitement of special telegrams and special correspondence, excitable readers are taking a sort of historic revenge by diligently perusing the history of the siege of 1781. They could not do better; and, for this purpose, let us tell them, there is nothing so good as the journal of the operations kept by Washington himself, and transmitted by him, day by day, to the President of the Continental Congress.

The Commander of the National forces is undoubtedly making good use of his time. While rumor limited the force of the rebels to twenty-five or thirty thousand, there might have been anticipation, of a really formidable resistance; but now that it has carried it up to seventy-five or a hundred thousand, all fears may be dismissed, for this is simply a reductio ad absurdam. We do not believe the rebels have behind the intrenchments of Yorktown a body of men more than sufficient to man its works of defence. Gen. McClellan obviously means to repeat the brilliant strategy of Washington, and, by hemming the enemy completely in, compel a surrender.

The Battle on the Tennessee.

Of the splendid achievements of the Union army, day unto day utters speech. Barely have we noted the tranquil success of the plans, so admirably matured by Foote and Pope for the reduction of Island Ten, when we are called upon to chronicle the brave fighting of Grant and Buell on the Upper Tennessee. The battle at Pittsburgh is justly described by the reporter, whose account is, thus far, our only source of information, and which we assume to be only defective in its exaggeration of the number killed and wounded, as the most formidable and destructive of modern times. What with the numbers engaged on either side, the desperate character of the fighting, the tremendous part played by artillery, and the fatal consequences of the defeat, it certainly lays just claim to this preëminence; for on no other recent battle-field have all these conditions been so thoroughly represented. The conflict sets at rest forever the doubt whether courage is a national trait. On the side of the Union as on that of rebellion, there was exhibited the most obstinate displays of valor; the loyal army resolute to win, the rebel army with the impulse of desperation, determined not to lose. Of generalship there would seem to have been less than there was of personal daring and persistent intrepidity; what, in fact, may be properly termed soldiership. Of such a struggle the fruit could not be other than a frightful sacrifice of life. There was, indeed, reason in Congress receiving the bulletin of victory in silence. On whichever side the dead had fallen, they were our own dead; our brethren and friends, who had gone out loyally to redeem the country, or those other brethren, and sometime friends, who, misguided and untaught, are struggling for the overthrow or prevention of imaginary wrongs. There is no aspect of such a victory, save one, which has not its tinge of melancholy. That one is the hope it authorizes of the war drawing to an early close.

For whatever the disposition of the rebel leaders to prolong their resistance, and however slight the diminution of the moral strength of the rebellion, we must not forget how rapidly the material for conducting the war is passing from them. With every State lost to them, the means of replenishing the treasury, of recruiting new armies, of procuring supplies, escapes them. The founderies and and powder-mills at Nashville, were, the other day, busy in repairing their losses; but Nashville is again in the Union. The Tredegar works have done yeoman service in replacing the artillery taken by our forces. A fortnight—who can doubt?—will place Richmond and them in our hands. When, therefore, we read, as in the story of Island Ten, of guns captured by the hundred, we know that the rebel ability to continue the contest is very largely diminished, and beyond the possibility of restoration; and we know the power of creating similar obstacles in the way of the Union army is lost. The same remark is true of their losses of life. On the side of the Nation there is no gap made by death, or damage, or demoralization, which there are not inexhaustible reserves standing ready to fill. On the rebel side there are no such reserves. The utmost strength of the enemy's resources were exhausted at the first effort. To strengthen himself at threatened points he has been obliged to shift his armies, not create new ones. To defend Fort Donelson, Floyd's Brigade was carried thither, the campaign in Western Virginia having ended for the Winter. When the new line of defence on the Tennessee was devised, it was only supplied with troops by leaving Pensacola undefended, and weakening the army in Virginia. This served, so long as the main body of the Union army remained inactive. But motion is now the order along the entire line. There is no point on the rebel front where defenders are not as urgently needed as at any other. This circumstance must of itself satisfy the leaders of the absolute fertility and indefensible inhumanity of protracting a struggle the event of which cannot be long delayed, and which is deferred only by heaping the dead bodies of their followers in the path of the Union advance. The rebels may retreat, but we must remember that a retreat cannot be indefinite, which is toward positions securely held by an adversary.

The War-Censorship Nuisance.—The following is transmitted to the Philadelphia Inquirer "by authority of Gen. Wool:"

> "A circular, issued by the rebels, was found by one of Gen. Hamilton's Aids. The purport of it was a full description of the present onward movement, with all the details; also, Gen. Magruder's plan of defeating the Union programme. The enemy must have received this information from a high source several weeks ago, or they could not have got the circular out so soon."

We submit to the Secretary of War the propriety of at once suspending all restrictions upon the publication of war news. We have his own statement that the censorship was established to protect the forward movement of Gen. McClellan. The Press, at an incalculable cost, has complied with the rules of the Department, and yet the only result is, that loyal people have been kept in the dark about matters touching which rebeldom has been flooded with light. The last excuse for the embargo has vanished. If, after the bit of evidence we reproduce, it be still maintained, it will be a gratuitous abuse of official authority, deserving the utmost popular indignation.

Naval Ordnance—A Word of Caution.

When the conspirators began to put into shape and form, several years since, their plan for erecting a Cotton Kingdom on the ruins of the American Union, one of their first steps was to provide the means of warfare. To that end their eye fell upon the Navy-yards at Washington and Norfolk. These yards, located within slave territory, were nurtured and enlarged in every possible way. They intended that when the theft was accomplished the booty should be worth the stealing. As a means to this end, they secured for these yards enlargement and the monopoly of certain species of naval material, so that other parts of the country should be dependent upon them. Immense sums were lavished on these two yards, especially on that at Washington. A man of some talent in supervising mechanical operations, was selected to superintend this yard; hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent on his education to make him an adept. In some of his gun improvements and adaptations he was successful; in fact, he has produced the most effective cannon used in any service. It was contrived that a large class of munitions should be manufactured at this yard only. Even the great New-York Yard has to send to the Washington Yard for half of the ordnance fabrications required. The Norfolk Yard was made the great storehouse of ordnance. Large contracts were given to the Tredegar Works, at Richmond, fostering the manufacture there till the result was attained—that those Works produced the best cannon in the country. Three thousand cannon fell into the hands of the enemy with the Norfolk Yard. These have been distributed all over the "Confederacy," and on every battle-field have they dealt death among the loyal men of the country. But the plan was only half successful. The Washington Yard, when the open rebellion was reached, slipped through their traitor fingers, and remained the property of the Union.

Now that the motive for a monopoly in the Washington Yard appears to have passed, it is curious to inquire why the effort is made in Congress to carry out the same plan—a wrong both to the general service and to the other yards. We wait to see a valid reason assigned why this Washington Yard, now that it is supposed to be beyond the power of the "Golden Circle," should continue the manufacture of articles for the other yards—the New-York Yard for instance—when the same work could be done there at a saving of freight, and what is more important, a saving of time. Or, why $250,000 should be appropriated to fabricate cannon at Washington alone, when the founders all over the country will do the work quite as cheaply. The heavy cannon which bears the mark of that yard, are now cast at private founderies and transported to Washington at considerable cost, to be bored out there—a work which might as well be done at the points where they are cast, and then retransported to the destinations where they are to be put in service.

It is also pertinent to inquire why the country should be confined to the genius of one inventor of cannon, as it undoubtedly would be if the pending bill should pass, and the motive and design of that bill be carried out—to the extinction of the advantage of having all the inventive talent of the country at command. The purpose of this bill, according to the statement of a Senator, made in his place in the Senate, is to put at the head of the Ordnance Department a pupil of the Government, whom it has so lavishly nurtured, and to give him greater pay and power than are enjoyed by other heads of bureaus.

We must confess that it seems a faulty policy to put a National Ordnance Bureau in charge of an inventor of guns. What other inventor would risk the hazard of a test with his great rival as chief judge? The Ordnance service must, consequently, be cut off from all improvement, except at the hands of one man. The scientific journals of England have made frequent complaints of a like policy in regard to Sir William Armstrong. He was given a position at the head of Ordnance Improvements. Of course, as is human nature, he cherished his own devices, and slighted, where he did not expropriate, those of others, and all the time he was spending the public money, till at one time it was true that his guns, then amounting to hundreds in number, had cost England $10,000 apiece.

Let us not, especially in the event of foreign war, be put to rely upon the resources of a single Navy-yard. Washington is but poorly defended against a maritime enemy. Had war grown out of the Trent affair, the fleets of England would have been up the Potomac in brief time, and the Navy-yard and all it contains, been in possession of the enemy.

Departure of Mr. Russell.—Mr. W. H. Russell, Special Correspondent of the London Times, was among the passengers by the China, which sailed for Liverpool yesterday. Mr. Russell's stay in the United States had extended over more than a year of our eventful times, during which time he has contributed letters of a varying merit to the leading London journal. Some of his earlier descriptive letters were characterized by all his brilliant and unrivaled power in that style of writing; but he was less happy, and sometimes extremely unhappy, in his speculative and philosophical essays, and thus incurred the odium of many who were, perhaps, not always willing to make due allowance for the extreme difficulty and delicacy of his task.

One can easily see, indeed, how, in order to deal with the shifting and subtle elements of our political life in a crisis when everything is changing, only the instructive apprehension which one acquires by being native and to the manner born can serve one. This Mr. Russell had not, of course, and the guides to whom he intrusted himself, were, it must be owned, not always of a kind fitted to supply the deficiency. It will be a matter of regret to Mr. Russell's many friends that he leaves the United States with the feeling that his career here has been in great degree a failure. He leaves without having had an opportunity to see a single battle, at a time when battles [illegible] history records.

The First-Honor Man at Pittsburgh.—The hero of the fierce fight at Pittsburgh is evidently Gen. Ulysses Grant. Throughout the action he is reported as constantly on the perilous edge of battle, rallying the men, and leading them upon the enemy, in contempt of danger. Let the malicious aspersion upon his courage, founded on an incident at Fort Donelson, be expunged forever. The only doubt about his bravery, is whether or not it amounts to rashness.

Will Congress consider the propriety of altering the gallant commander's name? It should be Achilles, not Ulysses.

The Rebel need of Artillery.—Gen. Beauregard, deficient in brass, has been begging the disloyalists of the Southwest to send in their dinner bells as material for cannon. The success of Capt. Foote and Gen. Pope at Island Ten must demand a further appeal. The number of heavy guns captured in the land batteries was seventy; while there were many others taken upon the rebel gunboats and floating battery. Losses like these must convert the very buttons of the army into artillery.

A Bounty for Southern Valor.—The Southern chivalry, who are so desirous of shedding the last drop of their blood that they are unwilling to shed the first drop, are advertising in the rebel journals for "substitutes," and offer as high as $1,500 to any of the "white trash" that will take their place. This does not show that the said "white trash" are insensible to the seductions of the lucre; it only shows that they have a pretty just estimate of the value of the Confederate scrip, in which the $1,500 is to be paid.

THE WAR IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Preparations to Reduce Fort Macon—Destruction of Bridges and other Property by the Rebels—Speedy Restoration by the Indomitable Energy of Yankee Soldiers—Occupation of Beaufort—A Surprise—The American Flag Flying Over the Town—Capture of the Absconding Collector—The English Ships in Port—The Blockading Fleet.

From Our Special Correspondent.

Beaufort, N. C., Monday, March 31, 1862.

Since it became apparent that a regular siege would be necessary for the reduction of Fort Macon, the operations for that purpose have been pushed forward with vigor by Lieut Flagler, under direction of Gen. Parke. On Thursday last I came down from Newbern with the Ordnance officer, on board the steamer Union, as far as the head of Slocum's Creek, where the Ordnance officer landed horses, wagons, ammunition, and other materiel. At Havelock Station, one mile from the landing, I found Parrott guns of large size waiting to be moved on the railroad down to Morehead City. This station is in charge of Capt. Arnold, of the Rhode Island Fifth Battalion, who, with his company, is guardian the place and protecting the property near by, which has been threatened by the rebels.

On their escape after the battle of Newbern, the retreating army carried off all the engines and cars toward Goldsboro; but one or two hand-cars, with a freight and platform car, were left. Gen. Burnside brought with him a number of good hand-cars, which have been put to excellent use in traveling to and fro along the track. An engine and the necessary rolling stock will be placed on the road without delay, and then business will be resumed upon the road, and rapid communication established between Newbern and the sea-coast towns.

On Tuesday, the 18th, a party of soldiers went up from Fort Macon and destroyed the most important bridge upon the railroad—that across the creek near Lucknow, or Newport Station, eight miles below Havelock. The object was evidently to prevent the advance of our forces eastward, to Morehead City and Beaufort. On the Sunday following Maj. Wright, in command of the Fifth Rhode Island, arrived at the bridge, and after examining its condition, reported to Gens. Parke and Burnside, when the latter ordered the immediate reconstruction of the bridge. Maj. Wright, who is one of the most thorough civil engineers connected with the expedition, and a practical mechanic, was charged with the execution of the order, and Capt. M. D. Field, with a party of mechanics, were detailed to coöperate. A number of colored mechanics, picked up in the neighborhood, were also brought into use. The bridge was a truss structure of 190 feet span, and cost nearly $100,000. Five weeks would have been allowed to build such a work, with all the materials at hand for the purpose. It required two days to remove the débris of the old wreck. He commenced work on Monday morning. An old secession fort near the place furnished timber, and the iron rods were cut up into fastenings to secure the upright supports upon the old posts. On Friday evening the track was complete over the creek, and on Saturday everything was ready for a train of fifty tons' weight to pass over. The bridge is now stronger than it was before. The energy and skill exhibited by Major Wright in the reconstruction of this important work must be highly gratifying to the Commanding General. During this time the Fifth have occupied Camp Graham, which was deserted by the secession troops on the 6th inst., and they have been doing picket duty within a circuit of two miles of the bridge. Camp Graham was one of the most elaborate of the rebel headquarters in this part of the State. It consisted of some thirty houses, snugly built, for the accommodation of the soldiers. It was near Newport Station, within a few rods of the railroad, inclosing a level spot for the drill and other practice of the troops. On leaving the grounds they attempted to fire the camp, but failed. They then carried off the light woodwork, and tore down some portions of the buildings. These defects have been restored, and the officers and troops are now in very comfortable quarters, so lately occupied by the rebels. The health of the command is reported to be good. They have just received assurances from Gov. Sprague that the command will be filled up to the regimental standard at once. They are also to have a handsome color, as a testimonial of the brave and efficient part they acted during the battle of Newbern.

Another instance of Yankee versatility is worthy of mention.

Capt. Arnold, of Company E, Rhode Island Fourth Regiment, after the battle of the 14th, was ordered to take possession of the cross-roads at Havelock Station. Near this place he came upon a large and valuable property, in the shape of a corn and flour mill, combined with a saw mill, belonging to Dr. Master, of Newbern. He found the place deserted, and the machinery purposely thrown out of gear, to prevent its use by the Yankees. The Turbine wheel had wedges and clogs placed in it, so that it would be both difficult and dangerous to attempt to start the mill. Being a practical mechanic, and withal possessing some experience in the management of mills, Capt. Arnold immediately discovered "what was the matter with the mill." He drew down the pond, came to the seat of the difficulty, repaired damages, and in a few hours the mill was jogging along as good as new, doing good service in the cause of the Union by grinding corn meal for the use of the troops. After it had been restored, a person claiming to be an agent of the Doctor made his appearance, when, everything being made satisfactory, the premises were gracefully turned over to him, without any charges for repairs. It is also [illegible] with a whisky distillery on [illegible] side of the road, belonging to an absconding rebel, was allowed to rest in its deserted and gloomy isolation. Dr. Master's residence, a cosy cottage, with elegant grounds, in Newbern, was also deserted, the Doctor carrying off only the most precious of his earthly possessions—two lovely daughters and the piano.

The house, during the confusion following the hegira of the 14th, had been entered by stragglers, black and white, and pretty generally ransacked. Finding affairs in this condition, three gentlemen connected with the Quartermaster's Department, Messrs. Wm. D. Hale, E. B. [illegible] and E. B. [illegible], took possession, restored order out of doors, and set up house-keeping, using, and carefully preserving, whatever remained upon the premises. Some of the servants, left to take the chances of conflagration and ravishment, still cling to the old mansion, and judging from their appearance, they are not displeased with their new masters. As the Doctor is reputed to be a Union man, he will not, it is presumed, object to the extensive American flag which has been hoisted over his domicil, though it be the only respectable American Ensign flying in the town.

Gen. Parkes' Brigade has pushed on toward Beaufort, a part of the Fourth Rhode Island taking up their quarters near Carolina City, where the headquarters were established, and where there was an extensive encampment left by the rebel troops. At this place there was a large hospital burned by the troops from Fort Macon, on their return from their excursion to Newport.

A detachment from Gen. Parkes' Brigade, consisting of the Rhode Island Fourth and the Eighth Connecticut, crossed to Beaufort on Tuesday night. In the day time their passage would have been disputed by the fort. They landed in the town without opposition, or, indeed, without finding so much as a guard to challenge their approach. In the morning, the citizens found their houses well guarded by Union troops, and the town in their possession. The visit, however, was by no means "ill-taken." The head men came out, and met Major Allen, and tendered to him and his troops the freedom of the city. They were invited to their houses, and every evidence of good will was exhibited by the people toward the new-comers. On the whole, their reception was courteous and gratifying. They declared they had never given their adhesion to the rebel movement, and were good Union men. Large numbers have daily come to the Major's headquarters to take oath of allegiance. The town consists mostly of wooden houses, set widely apart, with two or three brick buildings of respectable size. There were some fifteen hundred inhabitants in the place, but about one-third of that number are now absent—on business. Some, it is affirmed, are in the fort, whose guns look at them from the frowning battlements on the opposite side of the channel, and a few, it is admitted, are in the Southern army. They are quite isolated from the rest of the State, and being directly under the guns of the fort, the status of that institution naturally exerts a powerful influence upon the condition and opinion of the town. The location of the place, however,—dependent as they are almost wholly on outside trade,—naturally inclines them to the old order of things, as their interests would only be damaged by a breaking up of the Union and the destruction of trade and commerce. A secession flag waved over the town until Wednesday morning, responsive to the rebel rag which floated at the top of the flag-staff on the fort, but the commander of the garrison waked from his uneasy slumbers on that morning to see the hated Stars and Stripes flying in its place. A large American flag was found in the Post-office, evidently kept there for an emergency like the present. It was hoisted over the Custom-house. Meantime, the Collector, Josiah Bell, took the alarm and ran off, carrying with him $2,100, mostly in secession scrip. The same evening he was pursued and captured by a party sent out for the purpose, money and all, and is now on his way to Gen. Burnside's headquarters at Newbern.

The commander of Fort Macon, which is a small, but very strong casemated work, is a Col. White, (not Smith, as heretofore reported,) and was a graduate of West Point. He is a native of Mississippi, and is called hereabouts a kind of half horse, half alligator man, with a considerable touch of the snapping-turtle. He threatened to shell Beaufort if his fresh beef were stopped. The embargo was put on, but he has not yet opened on the town. If the Union troops occupied the place, it was to be instantly consigned to the flames; but the Union flag flies there as yet unnoticed by the belligerent Colonel. The fact that there are in the garrison many men who have families living in the place, is supposed to account for the postponement of the sulphurous display. He has been accustomed to fire on all boats seen passing between Morehead and Beaufort, which has rendered the trip unpleasant, and obliges our messengers to thread the devious channel-way only under cover of darkness.

The churches were well attended on Sunday, and in one of them—the Episcopal—the Rector prayed for the President of the United States, the Senate and House of Representatives, and all who are in authority. I cannot say whether the form of prayer has been changed since the advent of our troops.

The unction with which the prayer was uttered leads to the charitable belief that it came from the heart, as well as the responsive "Amen" which followed. The truth of history, however, requires that I should state the current rumor that the President of the Confederate States, and his set, were prayed for with equal fervor on the previous Sabbath.

The ships doing bockade service off the bar are the United States gunboats Chippewa and State of Georgia, the bark Gemsbok and the steamer Albatross. Lieut. Haxton, from the Chippewa, landed yesterday, and had an interview with Major Allen, touching the arrangements for the capture of the fort.

A guard from the Rhode Island Fourth crossed over on Saturday and Sunday, taking possession of the beach Southwest of the forts, and cutting off the communication with the cattle on which Col. White has drawn heretofore for his supplies of fresh beef. Thus, step by step, the fortification is surrounded by our forces, and the final attack will not be long delayed.

Two ships flying the British flag are lying in this harbor, one at the railroad wharf and the other at anchor within three hundred yards of the pier. The first is the well-known ship Alliance, of Liverpool, Capt. De Forest, which arrived here from St. John's, N. B., last August, with an assorted cargo. She found Charleston blockaded in June, and, failing to get in there with a cargo of railroad iron, went to St. John's, discharged, and came here with a full knowledge of the existence of the war and of the blockade. What she brought is well known to the United States authorities. She has been loaded with resin and turpentine (including four bales of cotton,) for seven months, and evidently waiting the opportunity to escape to sea.

The other is the ship Conder, of Liverpool, Capt. Gooding, also loaded with resin and turpentine. Both are in our hands, and guards have been placed on board.

In the railroad dépôt there are some five hundred barrels of resin stored for shipment.

Capt. Gooding protested against this proceeding, but Maj. Allen deemed it a necessary police regulation. His ship is lying where communication with the fort can easily be carried on, and Capt. Gooding admitted that Col. White sent for him a day or two since and desired him to have his ship out of range of the dépôt where she now lies at anchor, so that he could have a fair chance at it without injuring the Conder. Maj. Allen observed on Friday that the ship had been moved, which induced him to place a guard on board. Capt. DeForest did not object to the guard, but claimed the right to dismiss him whenever he saw fit. The Alliance lies at the head of the railroad wharf where any shots from the fort aimed at the dépôt would be almost certain to hit her. Col. White says he shall shell the dépôt if troops are placed in it, and, also, that he will open on either town if attempts are made to erect works of defence. He evidently acts on different principles than we have done at Sumter and Pensacola.

The lighthouse, which stood near the fort and to the west of it, has been undermined and thrown down, as it was supposed to be in the way of the guns which would be needed to command the line of our approach. On the whole, the belligerent Colonel shows considerable industry in preparing for his defense.

A considerable mail, intended for the garrison, was intercepted by Col. Allen a few days since, which revealed some important facts touching the condition of the command. A list of provisions sent to them since February shows that they have a tolerable supply of certain kinds of food for months to come, while the stock of small stores is limited. Some of the letters also make startling, and, it is hoped, exaggerated statements of the prevalence of "chronic diseases" of uncertain character prevailing in the fort. There are about 500 men in the fort. A large secession flag flies from the tall flagstaff, which is regularly hauled down at sunset and hoisted again at the rising sun. The sentry can be easily seen, by the aid of a glass, pacing his steady round upon the ramparts, which are thickly "gemmed" with heavy guns of the long-32 pattern mounted en barbette. There is one rifled gun which Col. White particularly prides himself upon, which, it is said, can send a shot several miles. There is no doubt that both towns are exposed to the fires of the fort, and could be damaged, if not destroyed by the guns. The three positions occupy the point of a triangle at nearly equal distances. The distance between each of the three points being about one and a half miles.

Since the conflagration after the battle of Newbern, it is reported that some seven thousand barrels of spirits of turpentine have been consumed in this vicinity. Probably some five thousand barrels of resin were burnt in this town (Newbern) on the 14th. There [illegible] left, which the [illegible] vessels are loading with [illegible] among the vessels is the [illegible] (?) which was seized as [illegible] will embrace about ten thousand [illegible].

The [illegible] who came out here brought only [illegible] with them, expecting that another one would follow them immediately, with some two millions of dollars, to pay off the entire Division. Something, however, has delayed his arrival, and meantime only the sick, wounded and discharged soldiers have been paid. These disbursements have used up all the [illegible] hand, and the rumor that the long-expected paymaster has arrived at Hatteras, is now hailed with peculiar satisfaction. A steamer, consequently, will be dispatched for him in the morning. E. S.

Funeral of Lieut. Fitz-James O'Brien.

The remains of Lieut. FITZ-JAMES O'BRIEN were conveyed to the receiving vault of Greenwood Cemetery yesterday. They arrived in the City on Tuesday, and were received by the Seventh Company National Guard, who promulgated the following order:

NEW-YORK, April 8, 1862.

COMPANY ORDER No. 7.—The members of this company will assemble at the Armory in full fatigue dress, with overcoats and white gloves, on Wednesday, 9th inst., at 11½ o'clock A. M., for the purpose of paying the last tribute of respect to our late fellow-member, Lieut. FITZ-JAMES O'BRIEN, who died from wounds received while nobly doing his duty in the defence of his country. Members of the regiment are invited to join us.

[illegible] will lie in state at the Armory until the [illegible] for the funeral. The following members [illegible] for guard duty from 7 o'clock this [illegible] A. M. to-morrow: Sergeant C. H. De[illegible], Corporal Thomas E. Delano, privates [illegible] Fowler, Holdredge, George G. Moore, Wil[illegible], W. H. Beebe. They will be relieved at 7 o'clock A. M. to-morrow (promptly) by Sergeant Coger, Corporal Duncomb, privates A. J. Smith, W. H. Schermerhorn, Turnbull and Risley.

By order of Capt. GEO. W. ELY.
DELANO, W. O. BIDWELL, Orderly.

At the time appointed the friends of the deceased took their last farewell of their lost, loyal and lamented companion. He lay in the coffin wherein he had been conveyed to the City; his features but little altered, and, except in a slight attenuation of the lower part of the face, scarcely indicating the great sufferings through which he had passed. Lieut. O'BRIEN was on the Staff of Gen. LANDER, and in the affair of Bloomery Gap was one of the few who obeyed the word of command, and rushed with that gallant leader upon the rebels, and achieved a brilliant feat of successful daring. The dispatch which recorded his bravery ended with a postscript, in which it was stated that Lieut. O'BRIEN had been wounded in the breast. The calamity that has deprived the Union of a good officer and literature of a writer who cannot be replaced, occurred immediately after the event referred to by Gen. LANDER. A reconnoissance was made by a party of cavalry; suddenly they came upon an overpowering force of the enemy. The rebel officer, confused by the sudden apparition, did not know whether the men before him belonged to his own side or that of the United States. He rode up within speaking distance and said, "Whose troops are you?" Lieut. O'BRIEN, ever vigilant at the post of danger, answered "Union." Two shots were heard; the one carried death to the rebel officer, the other has placed Lieut. O'BRIEN in an early tomb.

[illegible] Seventh Regiment volunteered for the [illegible] O'BRIEN marched as a private with his [illegible] to the Capital. In a letter, which the readers of the TIMES can scarcely have forgotten, and which the written history of the war will not allow to die, he described the progress of the regiment from Annapolis to Washington. Since then upward of five hundred members of the Seventh have accepted positions in the army, and are now fighting the battle of their country. Rev. Dr. WESTON—Chaplain of the regiment—who read the Episcopal service over Lieut. O'BRIEN's body, said that the deceased was the second of their number who had fallen like a martyr in a good cause, and received the last services of the Church at his hands. Lieut. O'BRIEN, immediately after his return from Washington, associated himself with a new military organization, and a few months since, impatient at the petty delays incidental to recruiting, threw up a Captaincy, to accept the commission of Lieutenant, and a position on Gen. LANDER's Staff. Short as was his service, he merited not only the approval of his commanding officer, but was made glad, in his last moments, by an autograph letter of thanks from Gen. MCCLELLAN. Finally, the regiment in which he learnt his first lesson in war paid him the last sad honors of a soldier's career.

The coffin bore the inscription:

Lieut. FITZ JAMES O'BRIEN,
U. S. Volunteers,
Died April 6, 1862, aged 33.

On its lid was the sword of the deceased, and the sword he captured from the rebel officer who gave him his death wound. The wound was not at first regarded as dangerous to life, although it seemed to jeopardise the arm. A subsequent operation, at which the shattered bones of the shoulder blade were extracted, led to lock-jaw, and this to death. The arm had not been amputated.

After the service for the dead, the coffin was conveyed to the hearse, and escorted by Company 7, and followed by several carriages containing the friends of the deceased, proceeded to Greenwood. The band of the regiment played solemn music along the course. At Greenwood the coffin was placed in a case numbered 180, and deposited in the receiving vault of the cemetery. The comrades of Lieut. O'BRIEN then closed on the portal and fired three vollies in honor of the fallen. It is expected that the relatives of the deceased, who belong to the best circles of Irish society, will send for the body.

Lieut. O'BRIEN, as we have hinted, was of Irish descent. He received a collegiate education in one of the provinces, and at the close proceeded to London with the intention of entering the University. His remarkable literary talents, however, carried him into a different sphere of intellectual labor. He became a writer for the Press, and after graduating through an ephemeral publication issued in the Great Exhibition Building of 1851, rose speedily to the dignity of a contributor to DICKENS' Household Words. In 1852 Mr. O'BRIEN came to this country, and at once became connected with the magazines and periodicals that were then in vogue. Many of his best articles appeared in the TIMES, of which paper he was for many years a valued contributor. More recently he wrote for Putnam's, for the Atlantic, and for Harpers' monthlies—contributing liberally, also, to Vanity Fair. His fertility was extraordinary—the slightest incident would bring forth a crop of charming fancy and exquisite language. The drama received from his hands many excellent plays—"A gentleman from Ireland" being one of the best known—and several manuscripts in this department of letters are known to be yet in existence.

As a literary man, Lieut. O'BRIEN was completely successful. He never made a failure, and in consequence was much sought after by publishers. It was his whim, however, to be fickle, and hence the writings that would have gladly been taken by one, were scattered among many. We are glad to hear that a collection of these fugitive pieces will shortly be made by his literary executors. They will be found to reveal a delicacy of fancy, a charm of style, a felicity of imagery, and a gentleness of feeling which no other author, save DICKENS, possesses. The following extract from a letter written on a bed of agony, illustrates better than words of ours the genial genius and calm bravery of the man whose untimely death all must lament:

* * * * I have nothing to write about except myself, a rather one sideed subject. Still I must write or die. I havn't yet told you of my sufferings, and didn't intend to; but the fit is on me, and I must harrow you a little. I hope to God you never will have to go through what I have experienced, and what I am liable to. For the first week of my wound, nothing but enormous doses of morphine kept me from going crazy with pain. I had to be kept all day in a lazy, half-slumberous condition, in which I felt like a kind of hot-house plant, dozing and living, and that's all.

It was at this period I conceived that prejudice against my left arm, which has since ripened into hate. I cannot express the feelings with which I have regarded that limb. I long to cast it off, to disinherit it, to cut it off with a (sharp) shilling, and thrust it out upon the world to beg. Its hand at present is fit for no higher occupation than to clutch pennies. While lightly morphinized, and in a semi-conscious state, I formed the idea that the aggravating limb did not belong to me, but was a vagabond and malicious arm that had attached itself to me for the purpose of preventing my being Commander-in-Chief, which I would have been as soon as I had fought BEAUREGARD in the Coliseum with a trident and a shrimp-net. All my arrangements had been made. Both armies of the Potomac were to assist at the spectacle, when, during my sleep, a rebel spy took away the arm on which I depended for using the shrimp-net, and left me a mutinous member instead! This is the true history of the case, although prejudiced persons might be apt to call it a morphine hallucination.

I left off morphine completely four weeks ago. It was a hard struggle to part with the great consoler, but I gave it up and took to brandy. They gave me a good deal of this in egg-nogg and milk-punch to sustain my really wasted frame. Imagine the 163 pound man you knew, down to about 120, and so weak that the falling of a book startles him as if it were the bursting of a shell. I wish * * * were here to sketch me as I am engineered out of bed to a big chair, with haggard face, spider limbs, and body fairly contracted with the pain of moving. The day after to-morrow I am to have a probe put into the wound and shoved down as far as my elbow, after which they will cut the flesh of the fore-arm open to the bone for six inches in length. So you see I have quite a pleasing prospect before me.

* * * * * * My amusements are not various. I can see from my window a railroad dépôt and a locomotive; but steam, although a giant, a reformer and an industrial power of vast etceteras, is not strictly cheerful. To-day is, I think, Spring-opening day of the season. The display is very tasteful and elegant. We noticed quite a chaste and novel thing in the way of sunshine, which will no doubt be extensively patronized. A very neat and delicate article of budding elm, trimmed with early blue-birds, attracted much attention, as did also a little chef d'œuvre, consisting of a pot-pourri of hepaticas, crocuses and snow-drops. Jesting apart, the day is lovely. The sun shines on the distant hills. The singing of the birds comes through my window with a grateful sound as I lie sad, and silent, and suffering. Oh, liberty of motion, health and strength! I never knew what treasures you were till now.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

ALBANY, Wednesday, April 9.

FAVORABLE REPORTS.

For incorporating the Brooklyn Loan Association.

For authorizing the payment of bonds created by the authority of New-York, for the defence of the National Union.

Providing for the collection of agricultural statistics within the several counties of the State.

A communication was presented from the Albany County Medical Society in favor of the Metropolitan Health bill.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

By Mr. MURPHY—For incorporating the New-York Exchange Company. By unanimous consent the bill was read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED.

Providing for the diminution of taxes in the City of New-York, by applying for that purpose the surplus revenue and sinking fund for the payment of the City debt.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate met at 7 o'clock, and considered the special order, it being the bill amending the code of procedure, which was finally referred to the Judiciary Committee, with power to report complete.

ASSEMBLY.

ALBANY, Wednesday, April 9.

The Assembly was engaged the entire session in the third reading of bills.

BILLS PASSED.

Authorizing the American Guano Company of the City of New-York, to issue bonds.

Making it the duty of county officers and Justices of the Peace to report annually to the Boards of Supervisors of their respective counties.

Incorporating the New-York Blind Mechanics' Association.

The Susquehannah Railroad bill coming up, Mr. PIERCE moved to recommit to the Committee, with instructions to insert a section providing the act for loaning money to said Company be submitted to a vote of the people at the next election.

The amendment was lost, and the bill passed—Yeas, 68; Nays, 42.

The Metropolitan Health bill was next considered.

Mr. MCLEOD moved to recommit the bill, with instructions to add the Mayor of New-York to the Health Commission. He spoke in support of the motion.

Mr. ALVORD amended, providing that the appointment of Health Commissioners be left to the Supervisors of the various counties affected by the measure. He spoke in favor of his amendment, contending that the proposition was a proper medium between the present form of the bill. Leaving the appointment to the Governor of the State was, in his opinion, very objectionable. It was taking away the right of the people to control local affairs.

Messrs. BROWN, BENEDICT and RICE spoke in opposition to the amendment, and Messrs. SNYDER and MCLEOD in favor.

The question being taken, Mr. ALVORD's amendment was lost—43 to 48.

Mr. WHEELER spoke in opposition to Mr. McLEOD's amendment. He thought we should pass this bill as it was. If defective it could be amended.

Mr. MCLEOD amended the amendment, making the Mayors of New-York and Brooklyn and the President of the Board of Supervisors of Kings County ex officio members of the Health Commission.

Mr. RAYMOND opposed the amendment. He regarded the amendment calculated to destroy the leading principle, which was to establish medical jurisdiction over a district. This amendment gave the control of the Board to a set of men who must of necessity be politicians.

The amendment was lost, 41 to 69.

Mr. LOUTREL moved to recommit, for the purpose of inserting a section for expenses of the Health Commission to be taxed upon the several counties in the State in proportion to their population. Lost.

The Metropolitan Health bill then passed, 68 to 46.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Assembly met at 3:30 P. M.

The bill to promote military education in the higher institutions of learning in the State, was referred to the Standing Committee to report complete.

Mr. TILLMAN announced the death of Mr. HALSTEAD. The usual resolutions of condolence were adopted, and, as a mark of respect, the House adjourned till 10 A. M. to-morrow.

The Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, Wednesday, April 9.

Day Calendar for April 10, in the Court of Appeals: Nos. 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 68, 69, 70.

THE PUBLIC FEELING.

Receipt of the War News in the City.

New-York, yesterday, wore quite a gala-day appearance. The occasion was the receipt of the news of victory from Island No. 10, and Pittsburgh. At an early hour the TIMES, and other newspaper offices, were beseiged by an expectant crowd, who after devouring all the news that had arrived, anxiously waited, and like Oliver Twist, asked for more. In the absence of reliable news many rumors of the most startling character got afloat. Great battles were being fought at almost every hour during the day. But the rumor that obtained the greatest credence was that the Merrimac had come out, and had been sunk by the Monitor.

Everybody that owned a flag displayed it in honor of our glorious victories. On the City Hall, Custom-house, and all the other public buildings, the Stars and Stripes floated bravely and in triumph. Yet, notwithstanding the general rejoicing, there was a feeling of sorrow in the breasts of all, that the victories had been gained by the loss of so many of our brave soldiers.

At the Navy-yard, and also at the military posts in the harbor, on Governor's Island, both officers and men crowded round the coxwain of the barge to hear the news published in our morning editions.

The News in Boston.

BOSTON, Wednesday, April 9.

Gov. ANDREW to-day telegraphed to headquarters, tendering the services, without compensation, of a number of Massachusetts surgeons, who are ready to go West and give aid to the wounded.

The news of the great victory in Tennessee, published this forenoon, created a profound sensation. The congratulations were saddened by the reports of the great loss of life, which it is hoped the official reports will prove exaggerated.

The News in Poughkeepsie.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Wednesday, April 9.

All the bells of the city were rung and cannon fired, amidst great rejoicing, on account of the recent victories of our troops.

The Connecticut Election.

HARTFORD, Wednesday, April 9.

Gov. BUCKINGHAM has 9,000 majority. Last year his majority was 2,000. The Senate is a unit against the Democrats. The House stands 181 Republicans to 56 Democrats, with one town to hear from. The vote of the State is nearly 14,000 less than last year.

A PROPER TRIBUTE TO THE AMERICAN SAILOR.—The reception to be given to-night, at the Academy of Music, for the benefit of the crews of the United States ships Cumberland and Congress, who so nobly signalized themselves in the engagement with the rebel steamer Merrimac, should be responded to by every citizen who values the existence of our Government, and who appreciates the valor of those noble-hearted seamen who defended the flag of our country when assailed by its enemies. This exhibition promises to be a grand affair. The sailors of these ships are to come over from Brooklyn this afternoon at 5 o'clock, and will march through Fulton-street and thence up Broadway to the Academy of Music, accompanied by the band of the United States ship North Carolina. In the midst of the achievements of our soldiers, which have electrified the heart of the nation, let not these brave sailors be forgotten by our citizens. Let the reception be worthy of the men and the loyal City of New-York.

SALE OF THE STEAMER MAGNOLIA.—Yesterday, at noon, the steamer Magnolia, that was captured off Mobile trying to run the blockade, was sold at auction by Mr. D. H. BURDETT, by order of the United States Marshal, JAMES C. CLAPP. The first bid was $20,000, which was run up, by Mr. STARK W. LEWIS, to $50,000, and to him knocked down. Immediately after the sale the vessel was at the risk of the purchaser. The Magnolia was built in Brooklyn, in 1857, and is 843,80-95 tons burden. Her length is 240 feet, 35 feet beam, and 55 feet over all. She has accommodations for 125 cabin passengers, and about 100 second-class passengers. Her two boilers are low pressure. Shortly after the purchase, Mr. LEWIS transferred her to the Government, and she is now under control of Col. TOMPKINS, the United States Quartermaster at this port. The brass cannon belonging to the steamer was also purchased by Mr. LEWIS, for $310.

RELEASE OF PRISONERS FROM FORT LAFAYETTE.—Gen. DIX and Judge PIERREPONT, the two Commissioners, with their Secretary, E. D. WEBSTER, Esq., of the State Department, appointed by the President to investigate the cases of prisoners of State confined in Fort Lafayette, commenced their sessions in this City on Monday last, and have thus far examined ten cases, of whom four have been released and six recommitted. The names of the released prisoners are as follows: Wm. W. Hendricks and Jonah Potterfield, released on taking the oath of allegiance; David C. Wattles and Capt. Isaac L. Vigne, released on their parole of honor not to extend aid or comfort to the rebels. The following were recommitted: Wm. W. Hill, Sidney Bennett, W. H. Childs, E. W. Cecil, Col. Tacuana, (known as the French lady,) and Mr. Chaplin, who is placed on the footing of a prisoner of war.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

SQUAN VILLAGE, N. J., April 8, 1862.

This morning, about 6 o'clock, the steamer Laura, Capt. Edward J. Pitcher, came ashore on Squan Beach, a little north of Squan Inlet. The crew were all saved, but the steamer will be a total loss.

The Laura was bound from New-York to Hatteras Inlet. When off Barnegat, the wind came in southeast, and an effort was made to run her back to Sandy Hook, but when the Highland light bore northwest, she took the wind, blowing strongly from the northeast, and had to run before it, with the expectation of reaching Squan Inlet. Before reaching it, her machinery became entirely disabled, and she drifted ashore sideways.

The Laura belonged to Stacey Pitcher, Esq. of Red Bank, and was formerly running on the Shrewsbury River. H.

There were no arrivals via Sandy Hook, yesterday, with the exception of the steamship Etna.

The ship Arkwright, lately ashore south of the Highlands, was, last evening, taken on the great Sectional Dock for repairs. The only damage sustained is to her garboard streak. She will be stripped, recaulked, and newly coppered.

The relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend her funeral, from the residence of her father, No. 21 West 38th-st., on Friday, at 3 o'clock, without further invitation.

COAR.—In this City, on Wednesday morning, April 9, of scarlet fever, GEORGE WASHINGTON, only son of John and Mary Coar, aged 5 years, 9 months and 5 days.

The friends and acquaintances of the family are respectfully invited to attend the funeral, this (Thursday,) afternoon, at 2 o'clock, from the residence of his parents, No. 582 Broome-st.

There were forms that left their footprints,
In the yard and on the floor;
Forms that passed across the threshold,
And return again no more;
And our hearts are aching, aching,
For the footfalls on the floor,
And our eyes are vainly watching
For the forms that come no more.

COE.—In this City, on Wednesday, April 9, of consumption, ELIZABETH SARAH, eldest daughter of Rev. David B. Coe, D. D., aged 18 years and 7 days.

FOWLER.—In this City on Wednesday morning, April 9, at the house of Mr. Isaac Odell, Mrs. SARAH ANN, relict of the late Barnabas Fowler of Yonkers, in the 77th year of her age.

One little bud adorned our bower,
And shed sweet fragrance round;
It grew in beauty, hour by hour,
Till, ah! the spoiler came in power
And crushed it to the ground.

Yet not forever in the dust,
That beauteous bud shall lie.
No, in the garden of the just,
Beneath God's glorious eye we trust,
'Twill bloom again on high.

SMITH.—In this City, on Tuesday, April 8, WILLIAM H. SMITH, aged 38 years, 2 months and 17 days.

DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS.
NEW AND SURE METHOD.
Since the invention of our "Insufflation Tube," the cure of inveterate catarrh, severe colds, influenza, diseases of the tonsils and uvula, diphtheria, croup, asthma, &c., &c., is perfect and speedy. No patient is troubled with gargles, neither will internal remedies ruin the system. The mere insufflation of our pulverulent agents produces such an astonishing result.

PART 15 OF THE
REBELLION RECORD,
ILLUSTRATED WITH PORTRAITS OF
GOV. ANDREW, OF MASSACHUSETTS,
LIEUT. WM. LOWELL PUTNAM,
Edited by FRANK MOORE,
WILL BE READY ON FRIDAY.
HON. J. RUSSELL BARTLETT,
Secretary of State of Rhode Island, writes:
"I see the 'LITERATURE OF THE REBELLION' bids fair to be quite prolific. But you were first in the field with the
REBELLION RECORD,
WHICH, WHATEVER IS PUBLISHED,
MUST TAKE THE LEAD OF EVERYTHING ELSE.
In fact, all the 'Histories'
MUST BE COMPILED FROM IT.
Indeed, even those who possess the various fancy pictorial works, must have the Record besides."
The Bath Times says:
"Of the various publications which profess to give the history of the great struggle for free government, now going on,
THE ONLY ONE which seems to us FULL, IMPARTIAL and RELIABLE, is the REBELLION RECORD, Edited by FRANK MOORE.
IT IS A MODEL HISTORY."
The Washington Globe says:
"It is an INDEX RERUM of the Great War for the Union."
The Providence Press says.
"EVERY INTELLIGENT MAN HAS OCCASION FOR IT."
THE REBELLION RECORD
Can be procured either in PARTS or VOLUMES.
TWO VOLUMES ARE NOW READY.
EACH VOLUME HAS A FULL AND COMPLETE INDEX.
Cloth, $3 75; Sheep, $4; Half Calf or Half Morocco, $5 per volume.

MILWAUKEE CITY DEBT READJUSTMENT BONDS.

CITY COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
MILWAUKEE, March 26, 1862.

The Commissioners of the Public Debt of the City of Milwaukee are now ready to receive bids or proposals from holders of Readjustment Bonds, for the purchase of such Bonds to the extent of the Sinking Fund on hand, (which is twenty thousand dollars,) in pursuance of section 10 of the Act to enable the City of Milwaukee to readjust its Public Debt. Such bids must specify the numbers of the Bonds proposed to be retired, and be accompanied by the certificate of the proper officer of any Bank, or of William Schall & Co., of New-York City, that the Bonds are deposited with such Bank or said Schall & Co., to be delivered for cancellation upon acceptance of the bid and payment.

Bids or proposals may be delivered to the City Comptroller at any time before the first day of June, A. D. 1862, upon which day, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the office of the City Comptroller, the bids or proposals will be opened, and the lowest bidder be entitled to the preference.

Those who have received payment of the next June Coupons must so state in their propositions.

By order of the Commissioners of the Public Debt of the City of Milwaukee.

FERD. KUEHN, Comptroller.

AN ACT OF GRATITUDE.—20,000 COPIES of a medical book for gratuitous circulation, by a sufferer, who has been effectually cured of nervous debility, loss of memory, and dimness of sight, resulting from early errors, by following the instructions given in a medical work, considers it his duty, in gratitude to the author and for the benefit of consumptives and nervous sufferers, to publish the means used. He will, therefore, send free to any address, on receipt of two stamps, a copy of the work, containing every information required. Address Box No. 579 Post-office, Albany, N. Y.

CROUP—SAVE YOUR CHILDREN.—A safe and reliable medicine. Dr. CHAPMAN'S celebrated compound Croup and Cough Syrup, used with great success for the last 35 years; an infallible cure for the croup; also the best medicine for influenza, colds, coughs, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, pain in the chest, bleeding from the lungs, asthma, whooping cough, consumption, etc. Manufactured and sold wholesale and retail by WM. CHAPMAN & Co., No. 42 Fulton-st., N. Y., and by Druggists.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.—EXCLUSIVE treatment of diseases of females. Patients from a distance provided with private board, nursing, &c. Remedies for monthly derangements from $1 to $5. Relief guaranteed. The Mother's Almanac and Ladies' Private Circular, containing particulars, mailed free, in letter form, on receipt of four stamps. Write for it and escape quackery. Office address—Dr. THIERS, No. 1,217 Broadway.

DR. POWERS' ESSENCE OF LIFE REstores the vigor of youth in four weeks; this marvelous agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitutions; office No. 12 Laight-st.; Dr. Power's French preventive; an important invention for married or single; price reduced to $5 per dozen; mailed free on receipt of price. Address DR. POWERS, No. 12 Laight-st.

YOUNG MAN!—YOUNG MAN!—YOUNG MAN!—Have you contracted that soul and body-destroying disease resulting from secret habits? Dr. POWERS' Invigorating Essence of Life briefly cures the very worst cases, while innocent of anything deleterious, and is warranted a never-failing cure. $1 per bottle. Office No. 12 Laight-st.

THE GREAT CURE FOR SECRET DISEASES.—Cures in a few hours the very worst case. Dr. HUNTER'S Red Drops; price $1. The greatest remedy ever as yet known, and contains no poisonous drugs. You can rely on this as a safe and sure cure. That is just what you want, and this remedy alone will do it. No 3 Division-st., New-York.

SOMETHING FOR EVERY LADY.—DR. WARD'S Great Benefactor. The great periodical remedy, infallible for the immediate removal of monthly obstructions. Office No. 12 Laight-st., near Canal, where Dr. WARD can be consulted confidentially, day or evening.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three cent stamps. 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS.—OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF TAXES AND ASSESSMENTS, No. 32 CHAMBERS-ST., NEW-YORK, Jan. 13, 1862.—Notice is hereby given that the Assessment Rolls of Real and Personal Estate, of the City of New-York, for the year 1862, are now open for public inspection, and will continue open until the 30th day of April next, inclusive. All tax-payers are earnestly requested to call and examine the same, in order that any errors in the assessment may be corrected. Also, all persons entitled by law to reduction of their assessments, by reason of being clergymen or for military services; and also literary and charitable institutions, by law exempt from taxation, are requested to make application for such reduction or exemption, previous to the closing of the rolls on said 30th day of April.

The following section of the Act of April 15, 1859, is published for the information of tax-payers:

SECTION 10. During the time the books shall be open to public inspection, as hereinbefore provided, application may be made by any person considering himself aggrieved by the assessed valuation of his real or personal estate, to have the same corrected. If such application be made in relation to the assessed valuation of real estate, it must be made in writing, stating the ground of objection thereto, and thereupon the Commissioners shall examine into the complaint, and if, in their judgment, the assessment is erroneous, they shall cause the same to be corrected. If such application shall be made in relation to the assessed valuation of personal estate, the applicant shall be examined under oath by the said Commissioners, who shall be authorized to administer such oath, or any of them, and if, in his or their judgment, the assessment is erroneous, they shall cause the same to be corrected, and fix the amount of such assessment as they may believe to be just, and declare their decision thereon within thirty days after such application shall have been made to them. No reduction shall be made by the Board of Supervisors of any assessment on real or personal estate imposed under this act, unless it shall appear, under oath or affirmation, that the party aggrieved was unable to attend within the period prescribed for the correction of taxes, by reason of sickness or absence from the City.—Laws of 1859, Chapter 302, Section 9 and 10.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

THURSDAY EVENING, April 10, 1862.

A reception will be given as above, to the Officers and Crews of the Frigates Cumberland and Congress, who so nobly stood by their guns and their flag in the late engagement in Hampton Roads.

Personal narratives will be given, by one or more from those ships, and addresses made by distinguished speakers.

The Band of the North Carolina will be present by permission of Commodore Paulding.

Subscriptions toward the same object will be received by the Committee, and all proceeds will be distributed among the petty officers and men, as a token of regard, and a just, though partial, indemnification for personal pecuniary losses sustained by these brave defenders of their flag.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

THE LUBIN BROTHERS,
(FREDERICK AND JEROME,)
ASCOMOTEURS EXTRAORDINAIRS.

Have the honor to announce that they will,
ON MONDAY, APRIL 14, appear in the first of a series of their recherché, piquant and entertaining
SOIREES MAGIQUES, which have received the admiration and approval of the elite and fashionable circles, and elicited the most unanimous and enthusiastic tokens of approbation from the cultivated, critical and refined minds of Europe, stamping them as
THE MASTER SPIRITS OF THE MAGIC ART.

The Academy of Music will undergo, at the hands of LUBIN BROTHERS,
A METAMORPHOSIS MYSTERIEUSE,
being transformed into a resplendent wizardian
CAGLIOSTROMANTHEUM; Or,
LUBINIAN CABALISTIC BOUDOIR,
brilliant and dazzling in its artistic beauty.

The entertainment is at once unique, select and marvelous, embracing as it does the results of the scientific minds of the universe, and a deep knowledge of the Sorcery and Wizardry of all AGES and RACES of the WORLD'S HISTORY.

Confounding the most analytical, mystifying the most critical, and convincing the most skeptical.

A GRAND CONCERT by the full and efficient Orchestra, under the direction of the celebrated Maestro, HARVEY B. DODWORTH, will occupy the interim between the first and second parts of the LUBINS' entertainment. A number of Quadrilles, Waltzes, Polkas and Operatic Gems, will be performed, during the evening.

Admission 50 cents. No extra charge for reserved seats.
Seats in private boxes $1.

THE OGRE AND THE DWARF!
with those two antipodes of humanity,
COMMODORE NUTT!
the smallest man ever known, in any age or country, and MONS. BIHIN,
THE BELGIAN GIANT,
the largest man known within the last thousand years, sustaining
THE TWO LEADING CHARACTERS, is novel, amusing and interesting. This is the first time in the history of dramatic representations that A LIVING GIANT HAS PLAYED THE OGRE, and the first time such extremes of humanity as A GIANT AND A DWARF,
the largest and smallest human beings ever known, have ever appeared together in one performance.
MONS. BIHIN IS 8 FEET HIGH!
COMMODORE NUTT IS 2 FEET!
and consequently their personations of the OGRE AND DWARF
are true living representations, and the contrast is THE MOST EXTRAORDINARY EVER SEEN,
and repays fourfold the price of admission to the Museum.
They appear in the above play
EVERY AFTERNOON AND EVENING,
At 3 and 7½ o'clock.
And are on exhibition in the main hall of the Museum at all hours, as are also THE LIVING HIPPOPOTAMUS, whose departure from the City has been unavoidably delayed, as has also the curious and amusing
WHAT IS IT?
which is also on exhibition at all hours, together with THE GREAT LIVING WHALE,
from the Northern Seas, the Leviathan of the Great Deep.
THE MADAGASCAR ALBINOS,
THE LIVING BLACK SEA LION,
LIVING MAMMOTH GRIZZLY BEAR SAMSON,
the largest ever captured alive, weighing near 2,000 pounds.
LIVING SEAL, LIVING MONSTER SNAKES, LIVING HAPPY FAMILY, LIVING TURTLE, GRAND AQUARIA, with its multitude of beautiful LIVING FISH, and near a Million other Curiosities.

OPERATIONS ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

plete safety, this morning, alongside the National works at New-Madrid.

Before giving the particulars of this feat of the Carondelet, it will perhaps be well to notice some events which have occurred within the last week or two, and whose character, from the necessities of the case, have been no more than hinted to the public.

Soon after our fleet reached this place, it was found that the work of reducing this stronghold would be one, which, if dependent upon the naval force alone, would take perhaps months. The position chosen by the rebels, and the disposition of their works, so as to command by tremendous cross-fires every approach from above, indicated that their movements had been decided by an engineering skill second to none in the country. The batteries were so distributed that their reduction by mortars, owing to their want of exactness, was nearly or quite impossible, while the fact that the approach is down a current that runs like a mill-race, has prevented the gunboats from operating with the efficiency that characterized them when breasting the swift currents before Henry and Donelson.

That the batteries could be taken by a direct assault, no one doubted; but it would have been at an expense of life and means that would by no means have justified the result, unless it should be first ascertained that the reduction by less costly measures was impossible. One of the plans suggested was that Gen. POPE, who holds the river at New-Madrid, should cross a sufficient force to the Tennessee side, by which the only remaining line of communication of the rebels would be cut off, and hence their speedy surrender made a matter of certainty.

Gen. POPE, however, had no transportation, while the swiftness of the river, and the possession of the opposite shore by strong forces of the enemy, made a crossing by rafts impossible. It was at this time—that is, when it was found to be impossible to reach the other shore by any materials in the possession of Gen. POPE—that Col. BISSELL made the visit to the fleet, to which allusion was made in a former letter. After an interview with Flag-Officer FOOTE, it was decided to adopt and carry out a suggestion, advanced by Col. BISSELL, to the effect that a way might be found to enable transports to pass from above to New-Madrid below.

Col. BISSELL immediately went at it, with that vigor which so preëminently distinguishes him—the same vigor with which he received some heavy siege guns at Cairo, and thirty-five hours after had transported them over the most execrable roads in existence, erected fortifications, mounted them, and had them playing upon the astounded enemy at New-Madrid. With a corps of assistants, he launched a fleet of canoes and skiffs, and distributed them all over the country between our position here and that at New-Madrid, with a view to finding the most available route.

In a day or two he had decided upon the route, and the transport Terry was detailed to attempt its passage.

About four miles above here is a slough, which runs inland through the woods till, at a distance of some five or six miles from the river, it opened into a sort of lake or basin, formed by an earthquake that shook this vicinity like an ague-fit some forty years ago. Crossing this lake, one reaches Chipousa Bayou, a creek which leads from the lake to the river, at a point just above New-Madrid. It was by this route that Col. BISSELL proposed to reach Gen. POPE—a route whose difficulties would have deterred almost any other man in existence. The first step was to deepen the slough for the distance of three-fourths of a mile across a cornfield, to an extent that would admit the passage of the Terry. This done, after laboring several days, the real difficulties of the task commenced at the point where the slough entered the timber.

It is not necessary to particularize further than to say, that the obstacles met and overcome thereafter were of the most gigantic character. A road had to be literally made through the dense woods for the passage of the boat, which included cutting off immense trees at a sufficient distance below the water's surface to clear the keel, the removal of overhanging branches that disputed the passage of the smoke-stacks, and the removal of acres of driftwood that had, for a quarter of a century, been gathering and solidifying in rafts and piles, and which was jammed in every conceivable position along the narrow slough.

Two weeks were spent in clearing out these obstructions, at the end of which time, the Terry poked her nose into the mouth of Chipousa Bayou. A proud set of men were all who participated in this enterprise, as they saw the broad Mississippi rolling Gulfward just before them, and reflected that one of the most arduous tasks ever undertaken, was so nearly and so handsomely completed. But their joy was short-lived, for they had scarcely caught sight of New-Madrid, a mile or so below them, scarcely had made ready to give a vigorous cheer of honest gratulation as the boat should enter the river, when they were saluted by a perfect torrent of iron hail, from a battery which the rebels had erected and masked, with a view of meeting this very enterprise.

With creditable celerity the machinery was reversed, and the Terry backed into the woods, beyond the reach of these unexpected favors; and there she remained till some steps could be taken to meet this unlooked-for difficulty. This occurred last Wednesday morning; before night, Col. BISSELL had reported the issue of the undertaking to Commodore FOOTE.

I infer that the programme concerted was, that in case Col. BISSELL should be successful in getting a boat through, the Commodore agreed to send down a gunboat, without which a transport would be useless. The opposite shores are lined with light rebel batteries, against which it would be insanity to attempt to land troops. With a gunboat to cover the troops and silence the batteries, the landing would be a matter of no great difficulty; hence it was probably determined to send down a boat as soon as the transport should succeed in getting through to the river.

Why the Carondelet was selected particularly for this enterprise I do not know. Some boat had to go, and Capt. WALKE, being nearly the oldest officer in the fleet, and having on all occasions performed excellent service, was dispatched for the enterprise.

The preparations made were few. On the port side a flatboat was lashed, loaded with bales of pressed hay, and calculated to afford considerable protection against batteries located on the Kentucky shore. If they got through safely she would need fuel, and to supply this a barge laden with coal was lashed to the opposite side, and by balancing the breastwork of hay, enabled her to be more easily handled. During the day (Friday) two of her bow guns were removed, and their places supplied with rifled Dahlgren pieces of 50 and 42 pounds calibre respectively.

This was all the preparation made, and, thus accoutred, she waited for night, whose black mantle would, to some extent, lessen the danger of the attempt.

At 10 o'clock she cast loose, and started slowly down the stream. At the same time heavy clouds had overspread the sky, and a genuine tropical (in size) thunder-storm came howling up the river. It did not rain in the ordinary meaning of the term, but whole gulfs of water came pouring down in masses. Nor did it thunder and lighten in the usual meaning given to those words, but it roared at us as if all the electric batteries of north, south, east and west had concentrated their forces, and were bellowing at us in unison, while the lightning in each broad flash was so vast and so vivid, that it seemed as if the gates of some hell like that of MILTON were opened and shut every instant, suffering the whole fierce reflection of the infernal lake to flash across the sky.

At such a time the Carondelet lifted her anchor, and slowly swung into the stream, watched, through the almost blinding flashes, by thousands of eager eyes, whose owners, regardless of the driving storm, crowded the decks of the other gunboats and transports, to watch the heroic undertaking.

Slowly she swung round till hauled down stream, and then she pushed straight ahead, keeping well over toward the Island. We could see her almost every second—every brace, part and outline could be seen with startling distinctness enshrouded by a bluish white glare of light, and then her black form, for the next instant, would become merged in the intense blackness that lay upon the river like a pall.

With beating hearts, we saw her arrive opposite to, and pass the first battery on the Kentucky shore, without a demonstration from the enemy! But just below was another battery, whose guns had often pitched their immense balls a clear distance of four miles; and with hearts, whose beating could almost, it seemed, be heard beneath our jackets, we watched her slowly approaching, in checkers of darkness and flame, the dreaded works.

A crashing peal of thunder—a blinding flash of light, which scarcely had disappeared when a broad blaze of flame burst from the fortifications, followed almost instantly by a second and a third. A few instants later, and the reports came up to us dulled by the roar of the storm.

No reply from the Carondelet. Slowly she steamed ahead, the sky all ablaze about her, the Kentucky shore vomiting fierce flames; the thunders of the storm and the roar of the rebel artillery commingling, as if heaven and earth had joined to crush the audacious intruder.

In about twenty minutes the Carondelet had passed below the island, chased all the way by the outbursting flashes along the shore, roared at by the thunders above, beset by the rain and buffeted by the savage winds. Then the flashes along the shore ceased, and then came a few moments of terrible suspense. Had she gone down, or was she drifting helpless in the swift current? Just then the roar of a gun came up faintly from below, then another, and another. It was the signal that she had passed through safely; and then there went up such thunders of cheers and hurricanes of shouts from the watching crowds, that even the storm itself was out-roared, and the voice of our jubilation sent down to the rebels, who were gnashing their teeth in baffled rage behind their fortifications.

To conclude, I will add, that forty-seven shots were fired at the Carondelet, not one of which struck her! She lay off last night a short distance above New-Madrid, and this morning early steamed up to the landing.

Such another scene of rejoicing at her arrival was probably never witnessed. Men hurrahed, cried, laughed—they fired cannon, tossed up their hats; and finally their excitement culminated in seizing the crew of the boat that came ashore from the Carondelet, and carrying them on their shoulders in triumph all over the town.

The fate of the rebels at No. 10 is now sealed. Three days more will see the works in possession of the National troops. GALWAY.

WAR BULLETIN.

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, April 9.

ORDER GIVING THANKS FOR THE RECENT GREAT VICTORIES OVER THE REBELS AND TRAITORS.

Ordered, first—That at meridian of the Sunday next after the receipt of this order, at the head of every regiment in the armies of the United States, there shall be offered by its Chaplain a prayer, giving thanks to the Lord of Hosts for the recent manifestations of His power in the overthrow of the rebels and traitors, and invoking the continuance of His aid in delivering this nation, by the arms of patriot soldiers, from the horrors of treason, rebellion and civil war.

Second—That the thanks and congratulations of the War Department are] rendered to Major-Gen. HALLECK for the signal ability and success that have distinguished all the military operations of his Department, and for the spirit and courage manifested by the army under his command, under every hardship and against every odds, in attacking, pursuing and destroying the enemy wherever he could be found.

Third—That the thanks of the Department are also given to Gens. CURTIS and SIGEL, and the officers and soldiers of their command for matchless gallantry at the bloody battle of Pea Ridge, and to Maj.-Gens. GRANT and BUELL and their forces, for the glorious repulse of BEAUREGARD at Pittsburg, in Tennessee; and to Brig.-Gen. POPE and his officers and soldiers for the bravery and skill displayed in their operations against the rebels and traitors intrenched at Island No. 10, in the Mississippi River, whose daring courage, diligent prosecution, persistent valor and military achievements, are unsurpassed.

Fourth—That there shall this day be a salute of 100 guns from the United States Arsenal at Washington, in honor of these great victories.

E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 9.

THE NEWS FROM THE WEST.

The synopsis of the newspaper report of the Tennessee battle was read both in the Senate and House. It was listened to with unusual silence. In the latter branch there was some slight applause, which suddenly ceased. The latest dispatch from Commodore FOOTE was also read, and this was enthusiastically received in the House.

GEN. POPE'S TRANSVERSE MOVEMENT.

About two weeks ago Commodore FOOTE, in telegraphing the Navy Department, said Gen. POPE intended to make a transverse movement, which would astonish "Secesh" on Island No. 10. The fulfillment of this prediction is already known to the country.

GEN. M'DOWELL STILL IN WASHINGTON.

Major-Gen. MCDOWELL is still in Washington.

THE EXTRADITION TREATY WITH MEXICO RATIFIED.

The Senate, in Executive session, to-day ratified the Extradition Treaty with Mexico, and Mr. PLUMB, of the State Department, will go out with it as special messenger in the steamer that leaves New-York on Saturday for Havana, as Special Messenger to Mr. CORWIN. He takes passage in the British steamer from Havana to Vera Cruz.

OTHER DIPLOMATIC MATTERS.

The Senate to-day also ratified the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with the Ottoman Government, and a special messenger will be immediately dispatched to our Minister at Constantinople, with official copies of the action of our Government.

Mr. ROBERT S. CHILTON was sent a few days since to Hanover with dispatches and the sum of $42,000, to be paid to that Government as the quota due from the United States in settlement coöperative with other nations of what is known as the Stadt Dues.

FRIGHT OF THE REBELS AT FREDERICKSBURGH.

The TIMES correspondent writes from Liverpool Point, under date of April 8, as follows:

Several Virginians belonging to Falmouth, Fredericksburgh and Stafford have come over to Liverpool Point. They say that the reconnoissance made to Stafford Court-house created the most intense excitement at Fredericksburgh. Every vehicle capable of transporting goods was brought into requisition. Whole families left for Richmond, leaving everything behind them. Orders were given by Gen. WALKER, commandant at Fredericksburgh, for all his available force to leave immediately for Brooks' Station, to defend the line of the railroad and repel the advance of the invaders. Gen. SICKLES' forces were reported by the Fredericksburgh paper as amounting to twenty thousand men, with six field batteries. It also has a report of a battle, fought between 500 Texas cavalry and SICKLES' entire forces, just before entering Stafford. They put down SICKLES' loss as 350, and their own as only 13.

The effective force of the rebels between Fredericksburgh and Aquia Creek is less than 4,000, beyond Fredericksburgh to Richmond, probably 10,000, including a few batteries of artillery. My informants report no scarcity of provisions. Confederate bonds can be bought for five cents on a dollar. Shinplasters, issued by banks and private parties, are of more value—commanding a hundred dollars in specie for every thousand dollars.

It is said to be the intention of the Confederate Government to abandon Virginia, unless the people of the State render more aid of men and money.

Gen. WIGFALL commands a brigade five miles from Fredericksburgh. He has had a serious misunderstanding with the General Commanding, HOLMES, and has accordingly forwarded to Richmond his resignation.

All men suspected to be for the Union are robbed of property with impunity, and no redress can be had. In consequence of this, most Union men preserve a studied silence.

LOOKING OUT FOR THE SLAVES.

During the embarkation of our troops from Liverpool Point, a large number of Maryland slaveholders lined the shore on horseback, said to be looking for lost slaves. No slaves from Maryland or Virginia were allowed to go on board our transports. Some free negroes were taken as servants. There were about eight hundred fugitive slaves left at Liverpool Point and Mattawoman Creek, without any protection. Some of the slaveowners threaten to make trouble.

FROM THE SOUTHERN COAST—ARRIVAL OF GEN. SHERMAN.

Gen. T. W. SHERMAN, just relieved by Gen. HUNTER, arrived here to-day from Port Royal, and reported himself at the War Department. He expresses the opinion that before this time Fort Pulaski has been attacked, and has no doubt of its final capture. A gentleman who arrived here from Port Royal yesterday, says that several contrabands, who came within our lines a few days since, reported that they were direct from Charleston, and that the people of that city were dreading an attack from our forces, and complained bitterly that nearly all their troops were in Virginia and in the West. The same gentleman brings information, received through similar channels, that Savannah, Georgia, is strongly intrenched, and cannot be easily taken. He says our military leaders, however, will teach the people of that city, in a short time, that they are mistaken.

THE NORTHERN COAST DEFENCES.

The Secretary of War has submitted to Congress a communication on the Northern Coast Defences, inclosing an elaborate report from EDWIN F. JOHNSON, of Connecticut, well known as a practical civil engineer, and connected with the Joint Commission of 1817 and 1819 for drawing and marking the North-eastern Boundary line. Mr. JOHNSON recommends the passage of Senator MORRILL'S bill and the adoption of the policy of placing in the hands of the President the necessary power to accept loans of money from the several States, for public defence, as therein proposed. Among the modes of defence contemplated is the use of railways, and of floating ball-proof batteries, in addition to the ordinary system of fortifications. His report is the result of careful examination of all the matters in question, including a long list of documents, based upon a thorough acquaintance with the physical geography and the topographical features of the country.

NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

The Senate, to-day, confirmed the nominations of SAMUEL E. BROWN, of Ohio, as United States Attorney for Colorado Territory, and JOHN K. RUSSELL, of Maine, as Assistant Quartermaster, with the rank of Captain; DAVID M. COHEN as Captain of the Marine Corps. Mr. E. D. MORGAN was freely discussed by the Senate in Executive Session to-day.

THE CASE OF GEN. M'KINSTRY.

Brevet-Maj. MCKINSTRY, who was Quartermaster on Gen. FREMONT'S Staff, and was nominated as Brigadier-General some months since, and reported against by the Military Committee of the Senate, is now to have a new hearing by the Committee, his case having to-day been recommitted to them.

NOMINATED FOR BRIGADIER.

Maj. S. W. CRAWFORD was nominated by the President to-day to the Senate as Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

TAXES IN THE NETHERLANDS.

In compliance with the resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 4th instant, requesting information showing the system of revenue and finance now existing in any foreign country, the President transmits a copy of a recent dispatch from Mr. PIKE, our Minister at the Hague, as containing the only information received by him not before made public. Mr. PIKE says he obtained, through the Department of Finance of the Government at the Hague, some particulars showing the method by which it raises the large revenues necessary to defray its excessive annual expenditure. The sum proposed to be raised for 1862 was 57,928,000 guilders, or $24,000,000, from a population of but little over three millions. Of this sum, 4,450,000 guilders, or $1,840,000, was raised from custom duties and an export and navigation tax. The remainder was raised by direct taxes in a manner which Mr. PIKE exhibits in a tabular form. Beside the items enumerated above he names the following: A direct tax on real estate, or land and buildings, of $4,300,000. The estimated value of real estate in the kingdom is about one billion, and this tax is computed upon its revenues, which are valued at $30,000,000. The tax is thus equal to 4¼ mills per cent. on the value of the property. A tax denominated the personal tax, which is levied on house rent, doors, windows, chimneys, servants, and horses, amounting to $2,938,000; a tax on trades and occupations, $1,200,000; an excise tax on consumption on the articles of sugar, wine, distilled liquors, salt-soap, beer and vinegar, meat, fuel and light, $17,300,000; a Stamp tax imposed on all bargains and contracts and on all acts brought into legal or administrative proceedings, $580,000; a registration duty of $1,760,000; a tax on wills and inheritances, $2,665,000; on mortgages and deeds, $145,000; manufactures of gold and silver, $100,000; postages, $800,000; tolls on highways and canals, $622,000—making a total of $24,000,000.

Mr. PIKE concludes his dispatch as follows:

"It will be observed that there is no direct tax on personal property or income, as such taxes are believed to stand in the way of industrial and commercial development, and to operate to expel capital. The late decisive successes of the National Government in Tennessee have produced their natural effect on this side of the water. When Charleston and Savannah shall have fallen, and our gunboats traverse the Mississippi River, all interest in the affairs of the Confederates will cease in Europe."

APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. STEVENS' bill, reported yesterday from the Committee of Ways and Means, appropriates money from the Treasury for the following purposes:

To reimburse the contingent fund of the office of the Secretary of the Treasury for additional clerks, authorized by the act of July 27, 1861, and for temporary clerks in the Treasury Department for the year ending 30th of June, 1862, $50,650.

For temporary clerks in the Treasury Department for the year ending June 30, 1863, $103,000, provided that the Secretary of the Treasury be and is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to classify the temporary clerks so authorized according to the character of their services, or assign to such of them as he shall see fit any compensation not exceeding that of clerks of the first class.

For the necessary furniture, stationery and labor consequent upon the increased clerical force, $7,000.

THE NEW MINISTER TO SPAIN.

The question of the new Minister to Spain is settled, but he has not yet been nominated to the Senate, and will not be until Mr. SCHURZ is confirmed as Brigadier-General, which will be in a few days.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 9.

Messrs. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Rep.;) CHANDLER, of Michigan, (Rep.;) SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Rep.,) and TRUMBULL, of Illinois, (Rep.,) presented petitions in favor of emancipation.

Mr. HOWE, of Wisconsin, (Rep.,) presented a memorial of the Legislature of Wisconsin for the establishment of a National Armory and dépôt in that State.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, (Rep.,) introduced a bil for the more convenient enforcement of the laws of the United States for the security and keeping of the peace for good behavior.

The bill relating to fixing salaries of District-Attorneys was taken up. After a discussion the bill was passed—20 to 19.

On motion of Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) the Senate went into Executive session.

Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 9.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the Senate bill to increase the efficiency of the Medical Department of the Army.

The bill proposes to add to the present Medical Corps ten Surgeons and ten Assistant Surgeons, to be promoted and appointed under existing laws, twenty medical cadets and as many hospital stewards as the Surgeon-General shall consider necessary. The Medical Inspector-General, under the direction of the Surgeon-General, is to have supervision of all that relates to the sanitary condition of the army. There are to be eight Medical Inspectors. Medical Purveyors are to be charged, under the direction of the Surgeon-General, with the selection and purchase of medical supplies, etc.

Mr. DUNN, of Ind., (Rep.) said he hoped the bill would be promptly passed. There comes up to us a cry of distress from our camps and hospitals, from our wounded and sick, who are suffering cruelly from the want of proper medical and hospital provisions. He would vote for any bill calculated to give relief to our soldiers, who have so nobly endured and suffered for their country. Our medical department needs reorganization and enlargement, to enable it to attend properly to its vastly increased duties.

The debate involved the question of incorporating surgeons from the volunteer service with the regular Staff, thus giving a broad field for selection, and this was agreed to.

The bill, as amended on the reccommendation of the Military Committee, was passed.

ALBERT G. HIGGINS was brought before the bar of the House to answer for contempt, in failing to appear before the Select Committee on Government Contracts.

The Speaker asked him what answer he had to make?

In reply, a written statement was read, to the effec that he had not heard of the Committee being in Boston at the time of the notice, and, further, that he derived an impression from the officer serving it that the next day would do, if he could not go that day. When he went the next day he found the Commitee broken up.

Mr. DAVIS, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) offered a resolution that, whereas Mr. HIGGINS had since appeared before the Committee, and answered all the questions put to him, he therefore be discharged on the payment of the fees chargeable on the warrant.

After a conversation, the resolution was amended by striking out the requirement to pay fees, and adopted, there being nothing to show that Mr. HIGGINS acted in contempt.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported a bill making further appropriations for certain civil expenses of the Government.

The House concurred in nearly all the Senate amendments to the Post-office Appropriation bill.

During an explanation, Mr. COLFAX, of Indiana, (Rep.,) said the amount for special agents was necessary, as these officers open post-offices and transmit other mail business as our armies advance.

On motion of ROSCOE CONKLING, of New-York, (Rep.,) the house proceeded to the consideration of the business on the Speaker's table.

The first was the joint resolution that Congress ought to coöperate with, and afford aid to, any State adopting gradual emancipation. The Senate's amendment, substituting the words "United States" for "Congress," was then agreed to by the House. The proposition, therefore, requires only the President's approval to become law.

The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the House bill, authorizing branch post-offices in cities.

The Senate bill, appropriating $1,000,000 for the abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia, and $100,000 for colonization, was taken up and read the first time.

The question occurring on the second reading, Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, of Ohio, (Opp.,) objected.

In case of objection being made to the second reading of a bill, the rule requires the question to be put, "Shall the bill be rejected?"

The question was accordingly put, and decided in the negative, 45 against 93.

Conkling, Roscoe Conkling, Covode, Davis, Dawes, Delano, Diven, Duell, Dunn, Edgerton, Edwards, Eliot, Fenton, Fessenden, Fisher, Franchott, Frank, Gooch, Goodwin, Granger, Gurley, Haight, Hale, Hanchett, Harrison, Hooper, Horton, Hutchins, Julian, Kelly, Kellogg of Michigan, Kellinger, Lansing, Lehman, Loomis, Lovejoy, McKnight, McPherson, Mitchell, Moorehead, Morrill of Maine, Morrill of Vermont, Nixon, Noble of Ohio, Patton, Phelps of California, Pike, Pomeroy, Porter, Potter, Rice of Massachusetts, Rice of Maine, Riddle, Rollins of New-Hampshire, Sargeant, Sheffield, Shellabarger, Sherman, Sloan, Spaulding, Stevens, Stratton, Thomas of Massachusetts, Train, Trowbridge, Van Horn, Van Valkenburgh, Verree, Wallace, Walton of Vermont, Wheeler, White of Indiana, Wilson, Windom.

Mr. ROSCOE CONKLING moved to reconsider the vote and to lay that motion on the table, which was agreed to.

The bill was then read a second time, and, on motion of Mr. ROSCOE CONKLING, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union. The rule requiring all bills making appropriations thus to be referred for consideration.

The House went into Committee on the Pacific Railroad bill.

Mr. PHELPS, of California, (Opp.,) advocated it, regarding this means of connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific as not only important in a military, but also in an agricultural and commercial point of view.

Mr. KELLY, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) argued that the time is peculiarly fitting for the commencement of this work, and our domestic exigencies demand its early completion. Until we shall have built this road, our country can never assume its just and commanding position among the nations of the world. He considered the subject in its various aspects.

The Committee rose. Adjourned.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE

Everything Progressing Satisfactorily at Yorktown.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE SIEGE.

The Rebel Steamer Merrimac Ready for Another Raid.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, April 9.

The Old Point Boat has arrived. She left Fortress Monroe about 8 o'clock last night.

The latest news from Yorktown by telegraph, 8th, is that everything is progressing satisfactorily. A battle is not expected within a day or two.

The Merrimac is confidently expected, with seven other gunboats, on the first favorable day.

The weather is cold and foggy; wind northwest.

The American's special correspondent says, the storm which arose Monday afternoon, and continued through Tuesday, doubtless prevented the Merrimac's coming out as she intended. She is now looked for confidently as soon as the weather permits. A gentleman who was on board the steamer Rancocas when she went up with a flag of truce on Monday, says the Merrimac was then lying off Craney Island. The Yorktown, Jamestown, Teazer, and four small tugs, were in company with her, all under steam. No particular change in the appearance of the Merrimac, from that presented when she was down before, was noticed. It was the impression of those on board the Rancocas that the whole fleet were on their way down when the flag of truce appeared.

The weather moderated since this morning, with some prospects of clearing up. The storm must have been severely felt in the army now advancing up the peninsula, deprived as they are, to a great extent, of shelter and tents, and compelled to a constant watchfulness in the face of the enemy. The roads, none too good before, will be brought to a horrible condition, and the public must not be impatient in expecting early results in this direction. We have exaggerated reports here as to the number of rebels on the peninsula, the formidable character of fortifications, number of guns, &c.

An order has been issued from this Department, (Fortress Monroe,) announcing that Capt. WM. D. WHIPPLE, Assistant Adjutant-General United States Army, has been appointed by the President an additional Aid-de-Camp to Gen. WOOL, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. Lieut.-Col. WHIPPLE will continue to perform the duties of Assistant Adjutant-General, and Chief of Staff of Gen. WOOL, which office he has filled with great ability and success since September last.

THE ARMY BEFORE YORKTOWN.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

THREE MILES FROM YORKTOWN,
Sunday, April 6, 1862.

At 9 o'clock this morning the troops at Cockletown were joined by those who had remained in the rear during the night, and the march continued toward Yorktown. Scarcely had the movement commenced before a heavy fall of rain took place, which lasted until nearly noonday. The route for a considerable portion of the way laid through a dense woods, abounding in the deepest and worst species of road-ruts. Into these the wagons and the carriages bearing the artillery plunged every moment, but, with slow movements and skilful drivers, no breakage of any kind occurred.

When within three miles of Yorktown the command was again halted, heavy forts having been discovered within a mile of the main road to the right. The troops were immediately ranged at the most commanding points, and the batteries wheeled into position in advance of the infantry, by whom they were supported. The firing was opened from the forts to the North, (two of them connected by earthworks and mounted with heavy guns,) the first shell burying itself in the ground to the left of the road, about a mile and a half from the fort. A Union battery was posted a little to the right of the lower fort, and then replied to the rebel invitation with great precision and accuracy. Both batteries then being opened upon each other, the firing on either side for a time was heavy and rapid. After an hour had elapsed, the rebels' force at the forts was considerably diminished by many of them withdrawing to a less exposed position, but the firing was still kept up at intervals of every three minutes.

So soon as the forts alluded to had opened their fire, another Union battery was posted in the woods on the west, and commenced to throw shell into the forts at that point, from which shell had been thrown among our troops by the rebels. The firing on these forts, as also those on the north, was continued all day long, and occasionally (after night, shells fell among our troops. Skirmishers were also deployed in the woods to the right and left, and an incessant exchange of shots took place between the contending foe.

All day long has the skirmishing been kept up. The shells from the rebel forts have been whizzing over our heads, and in the case of many a poor soldier, through them. We have been operating in the dark. Neither the force nor the position of the enemy have we been able to ascertain, further than what we have seen with the naked eye. We have heard their wild cheers when a shell exploded in our midst, have seen their soldiers riding across the country, and moving from fort to fort. They have heavy guns mounted there; 42-pound howitzers the heaviest. There is no doubt of that, however, for several of them are in possession of our troops.

Shells have been thrown by the rebels in all directions, most of them with a view of feeling our position. Our batteries have been changed from one position to the other, as the case may require, and our men are working like soldiers and patriots.

To-night the barracks of the rebels on the west were fired by them, it is supposed. So great was the conflagration that almost the entire horizon was illuminated.

NEAR YORKTOWN, Sunday, April 6, 1862.

To-day has been one of rest to the soldiers. There has been little or no firing from the rebel forts, although, during the afternoon some twenty or twenty-five shells were thrown at and into the forts on the north by a Union battery. Upon the forts named, two rebel flags were seen floating to-day for the first time.

The most important feature of the day has been the balloon ascension, which, in point of importance to the Government, has been one of the grandest balloon reconnoissances ever made. The first ascension was made at 5 o'clock in the morning, and then and there the position and strength of the enemy were ascertained for the first time. Subsequently, reconnoissances of from one to two hours were made, and important information gained.

The fortifications of the rebels are of the strongest possible character, and sweep an extent of country of seven miles, extending across the Peninsula from the York to the James Rivers. Behind these fortifications they have a large reserve force, so that the entire strength of the rebels at this point is rated from twenty-five to thirty thousand men. Their forts are mounted by guns of the heaviest calibre, and some of them are of a continuous character for miles, being connected by earthworks. The heaviest chain of forts are on the west, although those on the North—the point from which the firing was first commenced on Saturday—are sufficiently formidable to resist a powerful attack. There are other minutiæ of these forts in possession of our officers, which it is not proper to make known at present. Suffice it to say that through the means of the balloon ascensions, made all day yesterday, every information is in our possession of the design and intention of the rebels.

Gen. MAGRUDER issued a proclamation to the rebel army on the 28th ult. He states that the enemy is upon them, and that his number is far superior to theirs. He advises them to fortify themselves in every possible place, and to control every inch of ground. Three days' rations are to be cooked, and baked biscuit are to be carried instead of flour. The fight, he anticipates, will take place on the Warwick River. In conclusion he advises them to fire low.

Heavy firing, probably proceeding from our gunboats, has been heard on the river all day.

NEAR YORKTOWN, Va.,
Sunday, (Midnight,) April 6, 1862.

JOHN T. QUIGG, correspondent of the New-York World, captured a rebel, supposing him to be the one who shot the Lieutenant from Maine. He was taken to headquarters. Gen. HAMILTON had his horse knocked from under him on Saturday. The horse was killed, and the General escaped injury.

A circular, issued by the rebels, was found by one of Gen. HAMILTON'S aids. The purport of it was a full description of the present contest, with all the details; also, Gen. MAGRUDER'S plan of defeating the Union programme. They must have received this information some [illegible] weeks ago, or they could not have got here so soon.

Two men of MARTIN'S Battery were buried on Sunday morning, about 11 o'clock. The Chaplain officiated in a very appropriate and feeling manner. The bodies were interred under a large tree.

The roads, on account of the rain on Saturday, are almost impassable, and the transportation of goods is very difficult; the consequence is, the men and horses are placed on short allowance.

At 12 o'clock there was nothing of any consequence occurring except an occasional discharge of heavy pieces by the Union gunboats.

The following were the wounded: Freeman Leary, Third Massachusetts Battery; W. Rumbach, [illegible] second Pennsylvania; James Way, Company C, Berdan's Sharpshooters; Tim. Doolin, Third Massachusetts Battery; Jos. W. Tompkins, Fourth Michigan; George Field, Silas W. Bailey, M. C. [illegible], Frank B. Smith, John Colligill, C. James and Corporal A. O. Emerson, all of the Twenty-second Massachusetts; C. H. Tucker, Third Massachusetts Battery; Lieut. W. D. Morris, also of the Twenty-second Massachusetts; Silvas Wilcox, Berdan's Sharpshooters.

A division took the Newport's News road, along the James River, and when sixteen miles beyond their camp, came to Young's Mills, at Deep Creek. Some rebel cavalry and infantry were here encamped, who dispersed upon the arrival of the Union forces. They fired a volley before leaving, wounding one of the Union soldiers in the shoulder. They left a camp in perfect order—fires burning and rations being cooked.

The division rested here on Friday night, and then advanced, intending to form a junction with the other portion of the army before Yorktown.

At 4½ o'clock on Sunday afternoon no shots had been fired for near an hour. Previous to 3 o'clock, the enemy attempted to strengthen their works, but the Union batteries soon stopped them with a few shells.

During Sunday the sharpshooters were withdrawn, with the exception of a few as pickets. During the afternoon one gun was depressed by the rebels, and about dark one shot was fired at a squad of men who were viewing the enemy with a glass. It was a splendid line shot, but did no damage. The enemy seem to have the range of the whole field of battle.

It was reported at dark on Sunday evening that another of the sharpshooters had been killed.

The sharpshooters have covered themselves with glory; so have the artillerists. Up to Sunday evening the infantry regiments have been in the background—the artillerists and sharpshooters doing nearly all the work.

The troops seem anxious for an attack, and speak of it with great enthusiasm. About dusk the enemy appeared on their earthworks, as if desiring an attack. A shot from the pickets sent them helter skelter to their covers.

NEAR YORKTOWN, Va.,
Monday, April 7—9 o'clock.

All is quiet along the lines, with the exception of now and then an occasional shot from the sharpshooters. The enemy appeared on their ramparts this morning as though going through a dress parade.

ERASTUS TOOKER, Company E, Berdan's Sharpshooters; GEORGE GLENN, Company I, Third Pennsylvania Cavalry, and W. CHARLESWORTH, Fourth Rhode Island Battery, were brought into the hospital wounded last night and this morning.

A Union Captain, with a small squad of his men, succeeded in capturing two of the enemy's horses last night. The rebel pickets escaped by swimming Wormley Creek.

Six gunboats are anchored off the mouth of Wormley Creek.

No more soldiers are reported as wounded or dead up to this time.
